

The Black Cat

December
1903

Contents:

From Peter Lombard

and Frederick

The Patient Lover

A. J. C. and J. C.

and J. C.

What's the Matter with

and J. C.

A. J. C. and J. C.

and J. C.

and J. C.

and J. C.

and J. C.

and J. C.

PARKER LUCKY CURVE FOUNTAIN PEN

What perplexities does Christmas time present. No one is too old or too young to be remembered at this season. I can simplify matters for you greatly. If you are in doubt as to what to buy and want to give something that will be a lasting reminder of the giver for many years, select a Parker Lucky Curve. It is an untold comfort to all who write, whether it is used once, or so often a year. It is a present which will be appreciated by every one who writes.

PRICES

No. 1. $1.50. A splendid pen for little money.

No. 18 or 018. $3.00.

A larger and better pen.

Screw Joint or Jointless.

Nos. 30 or 020. $2.50.

No better quality at any price. A most popular pen.

No. 023. Hexagon. $3.00. New Style. Will not roll from desk.

Nos. 024 or 24. Screw Joint or Jointless. Large size pen. $4.00. Father, brother or any gentlemen would consider this pen a treasure.

No. 25. $5.00. Larger than No. 24. Sort of a jumbo. Holds lots of ink.

No. 5. Gold band. Price $3.00. Distinctively a lady's pen.

No. 11. Gold covered barrel. Price $6.00.

Very handsome.

No. 12. Pearl and gold, makes a beautiful and dainty present to either lady or gentleman.

No. 30. Full gold cover. Price $10.00. Beautiful and rich enough to be handed down as an heirloom.

No. 40. Price $20.00.

Positively the most magnificent-looking pen ever made. Engraved gold cover cap and barrel. Space reserved for engraving name of owner in the center of the barrel. (This also applies to the No. 30.)

The foregoing are all especially fine goods. My catalogue shows engravings of all these styles, as well as others. May I not mail you a copy, and at the same time, give you the name of one, or more, of the students who sell this "Lucky Curve." In event there is no one in your locality, please order direct.

Some people have ordered as many as a dozen Parker Pens for Christmas presents. Kindly write me to-day.

GEO. N. PARKER, The Parker Pen Co.,
10 Hill Street, Jaccerville, Wis.

P.S. If you will state in your letter that you are an INTENDING PURCHASER of a fountain pen, I will send you, complimentary, a 4-in. Aluminum Rule and Paper Cutter. On receipt of stamps for postage, to others.

A Valuable CHRISTMAS Suggestion
The STAR, a symbol of the day.
A RAZOR—buy without delay.
The ORIGINAL and mechanically perfect

STAR SAFETY RAZOR

Is a guarantee of comfort and luxury to the user, at home, while traveling, or at the office. Quickly, safely and easily operated without trouble or fuss. Think of it, 5,000,000 people are daily users of this razor.

This proves it to be a razor of merit. It has defied imitators. Our trade mark, "3 stars," guarantees you the correct make. Every razor we test before shipping.

The new STAR STROPPER guarantees absolute perfection to the user of the razor.

Razors, complete, $2.00.
Handsome Sets, $3.50 and up.

New Star Strop, $1.50.

We will be pleased to send you our catalogue if you will mention this publication.

KAMPFE BROS.,
8-12 Reade St., New York City.

Or all leading dealers in high-class cutlery.

"REVERSIBLE" Linene Collars & Cuffs.

Save Money and Trouble

Perfect in fit, never ragged or uncomfortable. Very convenient, stylish, economical. Made of fine cloth and exactly resemble linen goods. Turn down collars are reversible and give double service.

No Laundry Work.

When soiled, discard. We send by mail prepaid ten collars or five pairs of cuffs for 30c. Sample collar or pair of cuffs for 5c. In U. S. stamps. Name size and style.

REVERSIBLE COLLAR CO., Dept. O, Boston.

JOURNALISM
 Practical, profitable newspaper work, writing short stories, magazine articles, etc.
TAUGHT BY MAIL
 by our successful system in personal charge of Mr. Henry Litchfield West, formerly managing editor of the Washington Post. Successful students everywhere. Write for illustrated booklet on Journalism NATIONAL CORRESPONDENT INSTITUTE.
 26-48 Second National Bank Bldg.
 Washington, D. C.

PEN AND PENCIL

We teach Journalism, Story-writing, Illustrating, and Proof-reading, by mail. On request, we will send you a free booklet fully describing any course, and the achievements of its graduates; or a free booklet, telling how we sell $28. to exclusive publishers or to nearly 2,000 publishers by Syndicate News, and how we criticize, revise, and prepare MS. for publication.
THORNTON WEST, EDITOR-IN-CHIEF; FOUNDED 1895.
NATIONAL PRESS ASS'N, 68 The Baldwin, INDIANAPOLIS

Authors Agency.
 Send stamp for Booklet to W. M. A. DRESSER,
 R. 10, 400 Broadway,
 Mention The Black Cat. Cambridge, Mass.

THE ALTON'S 1901 COW-BOY GIRL
 TRADE-MARK.
 "Sequel to the Fencing Girl."
 Copyright, 1901, by Chicago & Alton Railway.
ART CALENDAR
 Four graceful poses from life; figures ten inches high, reproduced in color by a process far superior to last year's calendar. Highest example of lithographic art.
"THE ONLY WAY" to own one of these beautiful calendars is to send twenty-five cents with name of publication in which you read this advertisement, to G. J. CHARLTON, Gen'l Passenger Agent, Chicago & Alton Railway, CHICAGO, ILL.
 The best railway line between Chicago, St. Louis, KANSAS CITY and PEORIA. Take the "Alton" to the St. Louis World's Fair, 1904.

DENTACURA

The advance in civilization is accompanied by decay of the teeth. You need the best dentifrice to insure good teeth.

DENTACURA TOOTH PASTE is endorsed by thousands of Dentists. Insist on getting it. Avoid substitutes. Literature on application.

DENTACURA CO., NEWARK, N. J.

THE FOUR-TRACK NEWS

An Illustrated Magazine of Travel and Education

MORE THAN 128 PAGES MONTHLY.

Its scope and character are indicated by the following titles of articles that have appeared in recent issues:

Footprints of Columbus in Spain—Illustrated	Frederick A. Ober
A Watch with a History—Illustrated	R. S. Otis
A Journey Among the Siam—Illustrated	Frank R. Mac
In the Great North Woods—Poem	Edna E. Bayford
Where Pilgrim and Puritan Met—Illustrated	Henrich Buttermoth
In Rip Van Winkle's Land—Poem	Minna Irving
Nature's Chronometer—Illustrated	H. M. Albrecht
Abandoned Farms—Illustrated	Howard W. Osgood
The Three Oregons—Illustrated	Alfred Holman
Ancient Prophecies Fulfilled—Illustrated	George H. Daniels
The Stories the Totems Tell—Illustrated	Ludwig L. Holden
A Little Country Cousin—Illustrated	Kathleen L. O'Connell
The Mascones—Illustrated	Will G. Steel
When Mother Goes Away—Poem	Joe Ouse
A Little Bit of Holland—Illustrated	Charles E. Wallis
The Romance of Reality—Illustrated	Joan W. Guthrie
The War Eagle—Illustrated	Mary L. Austin
Under Mexican Skies—Illustrated	Marion S. Fenwick
Niagara in Winter—Illustrated	Orrin K. Dunlap
Little Histories—Illustrated
Old Fort Putnam	William J. Langston
Charter Oak Chair	Emile H. Dean
The Confederate White House	Herbert Brooks

SINGLE COPIES 5 CENTS, or 50 CENTS A YEAR.

Can be had of Newsdealers, or by addressing

GEORGE H. DANIELS, Publisher,
 Room 44, 7 East 42d Street, New York

Library Classics at Low Prices

FAMOUS ILLUSTRATIONS

All of the frontispieces are full-page illustrations colored by hand in aquarelle. These are such illustrations as usually appear only in the highest priced and most luxurious books—books that sell for from ten dollars a volume upward to twenty-five and even thirty-five or forty.

Otherwise the illustration of the sets is rather elaborate and consists (with the exception of a few text engravings in the Thackeray) entirely of full-page insert etching, a, photogravures, photo-engravings and wood—engravings by such artists as Cruikshank, Pailthorpe, Baudouin, Taylor, Price, Freer, Harper, Sandham, Laplanche, Wilde, Flameng, Rochegrosse, Schell, Johnson, Merrill and Dielman.

Dickens

Emerson

ELIOT CARLYLE
DUMAS THACKERAY
IRVING HUGO
BALZAC

MECHANICAL PERFECTIONS

These books are full octavo (8 x 5 inches). The paper is a pure white wove stock, specially manufactured for these editions. It is made very light, to save as much as possible in the weight of the books, but is opaque to prevent the type "showing through." The printing has been carefully done on slow-speed presses to secure a proper distribution of ink and prevent off-setting. The folding has been carefully done in order to obtain accurate folding registry.

The Irving, Thackeray, Balzac and Dumas are bound in dark red, and the Carlyle, Eliot and Hugo are bound in dark blue half morocco, with—crash—backram sides and gold tops.

Dumas

Our Guarantee, The Small Price and Why

The members of our Book Club run into the thousands. Every year we save them money in printing, illustrating and binding on account of the large number of volumes we have published at one time. The plates, illustrations and "getting ready" to print fifty sets of books cost as much as if you printed a thousand sets. We can always determine beforehand, within a few sets, just how many our Club members want, and print and bind accordingly, saving them thereby from $\frac{1}{2}$ to $\frac{3}{4}$.

Now, we have just saved our Club members a considerable amount on this years' book purchases. We have a few sets left—only a very few of some—easy payments, if you prefer. You have ten days' time to look them over carefully—you'll find them better than you think and will be satisfied.

Thackeray

Hugo

Irving

Balzac

SEND IN YOUR ORDER TO-DAY

Sent Carriage Free on TEN DAYS' APPROVAL

John Wanamaker

CUT HERE

Name of Author	No. of Vols.	No. of Illus.	Special Prices
Eliot,	8	53	$18.00
Thackeray,	10	256	22.50
Balzac,	18	91	40.50
Hugo,	10	49	22.50
Carlyle,	10	71	22.50
Irving,	10	89	22.50
Dumas,	15	99	33.75

SCALE OF PAYMENTS

On any single set $2.00 a month

On orders for more than one set amounting to less than $60—$3 a month

On orders amounting to more than $60 and less than $80—$4 a month

On orders amounting to more than $80 and less than $100—$5 a month

On orders amounting to more than $100 and less than $125—$6 a month

On orders amounting to more than $125 and less than $150—$7 a month

On orders amounting to $150—$8 a month.

JOHN WANAMAKER, New York or Philadelphia

The Black Cat
Dec.

Please send me Standard Library sets not crossed off in list above, total number of volumes _____ total price _____

If I do not return the same to you within ten days of their receipt by me, I will pay you or your order $ _____ a month till their purchase is completed. Title in books is not to pass to me till entirely paid for.

NAME _____

ADDRESS _____

Be a Writer

Our authors are actual successes. We start them right. Send for our "Editor's Special Offer." Manuscripts revised. NOT A SCHOOL.

WATERS' AID ASSOCIATION, 150 Nassau St., New York

LEARN PROOFREADING

A profession that offers literary opportunity with pecuniary profit is one that intelligent people desire. We, the original proofreading school, can prepare you for the work more thoroughly than any other.

ROSE CORRESPONDENCE SCHOOL, Philadelphia

Government Positions

14,983 Appointments were made to Civil Service places during the past year. This was 4,600 more than were appointed during any previous year. Excellent opportunities for young people. Hundreds of those whom we prepare BY MAIL for the examinations are annually appointed. Full information about all government positions free. Write for our Civil Service Catalogue and dates of examinations.

Columbian Correspondence College,
207-25 Pa. Ave. S. E. WASHINGTON, D. C.

Justice to the Woman

BY BERNIE BARCOCK.
Six Special Drawings.

This powerful and startling novel has just been issued at $1.50 (postpaid) by
BROADWAY PUBLISHING COMPANY
835 Broadway, New York City.

NOTE. — We shall be pleased to receive MRS. of all kinds, which will be examined and reported upon entirely without charge. Acceptable short MSS. will be taken up for sale on a commission of 15 per cent. and offered in our list of 500 publications. Acceptable BOOK MSS. will be immediately considered for listing in volume form. CIRCULAR FREE.

SHORTHAND IN 30 DAYS

Boyd's Syllabic. No ruled line "position," no shading, no long list of word signs to copy, 9 characters, 112 syllables. Speedy and practical. Students in high grade positions. Employers pleased. Easily learned in 30 days. To prove what we say we will send the complete First Lesson, covering 80 of the 112 syllables, testimonials and descriptive circulars, to anyone interested, on receipt of two 2-cent stamps.
CHICAGO CORRESPONDENCE SCHOOLS
(Incorporated) 19 National Life Building, Chicago, Ill.

MUSIC LESSONS FREE

music you use, which is small. We teach by mail only and guarantee success. Hundreds write: "Wish I had known of your school before." Any instrument supplied, cash or credit. For booklet, testimonials and FREE tuition contract, address,
U. S. SCHOOL OF MUSIC, Box 513, 19 Union Square, New York, N. Y.

Every Writer Reads "The Editor"

Sample copy for the asking.

THE EDITOR, 150 NASSAU STREET, NEW YORK

CONAN DOYLE

NEW YORK SHORT STORY INSTITUTE
(Dept. 10) Folson Building, 23th and Broadway, New York City

LEARN TO WRITE ADVERTISEMENTS

When you think of learning to write advertisements you think of Page-Davis Co., because it is an assured fact that everything to qualify you as an advertisement writer is taught by

PAGE-DAVIS CO.

The fact that Page-Davis Co. is the oldest institution and the most substantial of its kind in the world today, means much to you. "Page-Davis Men" are in demand because Page-Davis Graduates are recognized as knowing the business; that is why they earn from $25.00 to $100.00 Per Week. That is why this Original School has always been the biggest, best and most substantial institution of its kind in the world. We teach you the business by mail — thoroughly, practically. Our handsome Prospectus mailed free on request, will tell you more about it.

PAGE-DAVIS COMPANY,

STITE 25, 80 Wabash Ave., CHICAGO.

LEARN ADVERTISING

If you want to know how to do your advertising at less cost, if you wish to become an advertising writer or manager at $50 to $100 weekly, if you wish to gain knowledge that will positively increase your salary or income, send three 2c. stamps for prospectus telling "Who Should Study Advertising," and booklets, "The Ill Partisans of Brother Bill," "Other People's Brains," and "How Shall a Young Man Succeed."

CHARLES AUSTIN BATES, 190 William St., N.Y.

WHAT IS YOUR INCOME?

"The Make Method" Why not increase it as hundreds of successful graduates have done. We teach

Always a New World in Copying

1008 Williams Bldg., Cor. Fifth Ave., and Monroe St., Chicago

ADVERTISING

by mail. Show you how to develop your own business or fit you for good positions. The demand for empirical advertising men exceeds the supply. Don't waste your time—pay a little more and get the best. Send today for FREE test blank and get Annual Announcement.

CHICAGO COLLEGE OF ADVERTISING
1008 Williams Bldg., Cor. Fifth Ave., and Monroe St., Chicago

IF YOU ARE A WRITER

We can aid you to find a market for anything you write.

MRS. SUCCESSFULLY PLACED.

Criticized Revised, Typewritten.

References: Edwin Markham, Margaret E. Sangster, and others. Established 1890. Send for leaflet.

UNITED LITERARY PRESS 127 5th AVE.
NEW YORK.

at your home. For a limited time we will give, free, 48 music lessons on either Piano, Organ, Banjo, Guitar, Cornet, Viola, or Mandolin, (your expense will only be the cost of postage and the guarantee success. Hundreds write: "Wish I had known of your school before." Any instrument supplied, cash or credit. For booklet, testimonials and FREE tuition contract, address, received $1.00 per word for a series of short stories. Would YOU not like to acquire in a brief period, the art—the secret—of writing suitable short stories, so that you might enter upon one of the most delightful and remunerative of vocations? We can teach you HOW, by mail, if you will diligently follow our instructions; and when you are able to write stories we will assist you to sell them. We are able to guarantee results even with those who have had no previous acquaintance with literary work, because we do only one thing—we are specialists—while the average correspondence school tries to teach too different subjects. Send a postal for our beautiful new circular entitled "HOW TO WRITE STORIES AND SELL THEM." Address, bring high prices. Thousands of good stories, defective in some particular, which might easily be remedied, make up the great mass of "rejected manuscripts." Our School of Journalism, in charge of successful authors, short-story writers, magazine contributors, critics, corrects and revises, as well as teaches how to write. Write for booklet. National Correspondence Institute, 26-51 Second National Bank Bldg., Washington, D. C.
U. S. SCHOOL OF MUSIC, Box 513, 19 Union Square, New York, N. Y.

SHORT STORIES

The Woman in Stone

BY HARRIET WHEELER.

"No more powerful and fascinating romance of the old French-Canadian days has ever been written." Just published at $1.00 (postpaid) by

BROADWAY PUBLISHING COMPANY
835 Broadway, New York City.

If you have a liking or a natural talent for Drawing, not this cost, mail with your address and receive our Free Sample Lesson Circular with terms. N. Y. School of Caricature, 55 World Bldg., N. Y. City.

LEARN to DANCE

Military Dip, Five Step, Waltz, Schottische, Two Step, all mailed with charts and music for 50c. (silver). Henry O. Opton, Master of Dancing, Salem, Mass.

GO ON THE STAGE

EASY INSTRUCTIONS. POSITIONS SECURED.
ACTING TAUGHT BY MAIL.

WRITE FOR FREE BOOKLET. HENRY KEANE,
Childs Bldg., Broadway and 34th St., N. Y.

Can You Whistle a Tune?

If so you can play it on an organ or piano in one hour's time by our simplex method. Teaches how to play any air on the above instruments by ear. Playing by ear is not the gift of a few but all, and any air that is familiar to the mind can be played. All rights on the published method are reserved and we have placed same on the market at $5 each. We desire to secure a dealer in every town and therefore make the following

SPECIAL OFFER

To the first person in each town who will send us the name of their dealer in music, and one dollar in stamps to pay postage, etc., we will send prepaid the complete method. If any replies have been received from your town before yours reaches us the stamps will be returned.

On this offer no attention will be paid to replies unless accompanied by the stamps.

Address

THE ARNOLD PUBLISHING COMPANY
LOS ANGELES, CALIF.

MARIE JEANNE DU BARRY.

SPECIAL OFFER

French Court Memoirs

FROM Henry of Navarre to and through the reign of Du Barry (whose personal memoirs occupy four of the volumes), this set of books covers the back stairs and kitchen gossip side of French Court History, much as Guizot covers its outward manifestations. And where so much was set afoot with secret and obscure design, where so little was open and above-board, where boudoir counsils dictated treaties and the wounded vanity of favorites instigated campaigns, where a low-born woman's caprice could send forth the torch to lay waste the half of Europe, it is impossible to comprehend the curious events of his. / without knowing the intimate details of those underlying causes. It is characteristic of these Memoirs that, in dealing with the peculiar affairs which are associated in every one's mind with French Court history of the period, their very simplicity and frankness purges them of all offense.

The undersigned controls a few sets of these personal French Court Memoirs (translated with fidelity into English), which can be secured in complete sets only, at a very low price, and on small monthly payments, if preferred, provided application be made at once.

These few copies are from a limited number and registered 42 last edition, bound up to sell at $10 a volume. But through a binder's error the leather of the volumes is imperfectly matched; consequently it becomes advisable to dispose of them outside of regular subscription channels, and at a price about equal to the value of the unbound sheets.

A booklet fully describing the edition will be sent, together with price particulars, if you sign and send the inquiry slip below at once. Address,

J. B. Chadbourne, 11 E. 16th St., New York.

Please send me particulars—advertisement in December Black Cat.

Name _____

Address _____

A Few Slightly Damaged Sets

Books are Royal Octavo—About 11 inches tall

Ridpath's History of the World

In cleaning up our stock preliminary to the season of 1903-1904, we find a few slightly "rubbed" sets of Ridpath's History of the World.

There are only about fifty in all, and sooner than rebind such a small lot we prefer to dispose of them at a big discount from the regular price and on payment of $2 a month.

If you'd like to possess the only world's history that reads like a story-book—yet is recognized by such men as William McKinley, Benjamin Harrison, Dr. Cuyler, Bishop Vincent, and hundreds more, as a standard authority and the greatest historical reference work in existence—send for the free specimen book TO-DAY, using the coupon below.

That specimen book will tell you all about the history—How it came to be written, How it will interest and entertain you, Why you need it, And how you can secure one of the slightly rubbed sets at much less than the subscription price.

Ridpath's History of the World is a great big set of nine royal octavo volumes, with 4,000 illustrations and many maps and color-plates. You pay only $1 down. The complete set is sent at once. The rest you pay in monthly payments of $2. Cut the coupon off and send it to-day.

MERRILL & BAKER, PUBLISHERS

9 and 11 E. 16th St., New York

The Black Cat.
Dec.

MERRILL & BAKER
9 and 11 E. 16th St.
New York.

Without cost to me, please send the RIDPATH Sample-page and illustration book which contains specimens of the Race Charts, Chronological Charts, Colored Race-Type Plates, Engravings, Photo-engravings, Tint-Block Color-Plates, Text-Pages, with full particulars and prices of the slightly damaged sets.

Name

Inquiry Coupon Address

Cut this corner off along this line

Malta-Vita

GIFT DISTRIBUTION

"No Work, No Heat: Just Cream, Then Eat." MALTA-VITA, the delicious, malted, flaked, cooked, and toasted whole wheat food, parrot and most nutritious, always ready to serve.

SAVE THE COUPONS

In all packages of Malta-Vita And get a

$365.00 HIMBALL PIANO, HIGH-GRADE GOLD-FILLED WATCH, ENAMELED EIGHT-DAY MANTEL CLOCK

A 1 standard plate knives, forks, sugar shells, butter knives, spoons all sizes, also fountain pens. Full particulars on the coupons in each package. Do not miss this opportunity of securing valuable premiums free. For sale by all first-class grocers.

The Black Cat

A Monthly Magazine of Original Short Stories.

Copyright, 1903, by The Shortstory Publishing Company. All rights reserved.

Vol. IX., No. 3.
Whole No., 29.

DECEMBER, 1903.

5 cents a copy.
50 cents a year.

Entered at the Post-Office at Boston, Mass., as second-class matter.

THE BLACK CAT is devoted exclusively to original, unusual, fascinating stories—every number is complete in itself. It publishes no serials, translations, borrowings, or stealings. It pays nothing for the name or reputation of a writer, but the highest price on record for Stories that are Stories, and it pays not according to length, but according to strength. To receive attention, manuscripts must be sent unrolled, fully prepaid, and accompanied by addressed and stamped envelope for return. All MSS. are received and returned at their writers' risk.

CAUTION.—The entire contents of THE BLACK CAT are protected by copyright, and publishers everywhere are cautioned against reproducing any of the stories, either wholly or in part.

Fox's Free Laundry.*

BY HARRY IRVINE GREENE.

OX hired the place because he is a crank. He is entirely unlike the common herd that eat by rule, swear by note, and sleep just because the sun does. For breakfast he always has soup and ice cream, for his lunch nuts, for dinner eggs on toast and breakfast food. When he swears he does not yell out the old standard formulæ for profanity, but instead speaks gently, beseechingly and originally, so that those who hear his voice and not his words think he is blessing them. As for sleeping simply because it is night, he considers that merely a fad. He always gets to bed at eight o'clock in the morning, rises at six in the evening, and says he feels better for it. Instead of having his life insured, paying the insurance company continually and never getting anything out of it until he is dead and doesn't need it, he makes a wager every day with his friend Cobb, of twenty thousand dollars to five that he will live for the ensuing twenty-four hours. He has always won, and in that way gets enough out of Cobb to live on. When he finally loses, he says he won't mind, and Cobb will suddenly have enough to go to raising poultry, which is his greatest ambition.

* Copyright, 1903, by The Shortstory Publishing Company. All rights reserved.

But about the house. It had once been a vain place, with four lightning rods, a kennel, a summer kitchen and a laundry, but the kennel had gone to the dogs, the rods were eaten to the core with hungry rust, and the kitchen and laundry had been boarded up and padlocked so long that the memory of man runneth not to the contrary. Years before, a sign upon the front of the house had made the following affirmation: .

E. GONDE THIS PROPERTY TO SELL

but Time had kept rubbing away at it whenever there was nothing else to do, and on the day Fox entered the premises to take possession, the dim board bore merely the following:

GON E P OP TO ELL

and so Fox knocked the senseless thing down with the head of a hatchet and chopped it into kindling. The outside walls were blistered by the sun, the gate squalled if one even looked at it, and the lawn badly needed a hair-cut. But Fox liked the place all the better for those reasons, and when his furniture came he put the cook stove in the parlor, the organ in the bathroom, and fixed for himself a cozy chamber in the kitchen. Then he was ready to begin housekeeping.

He rose promptly at six o'clock in the evening of the second day, ate his breakfast and, taking a chair, went out and propped it against the laundry to superintend the rising of the moon. This function called for the accompaniment of a quiet smoke, and drawing a cigar from his pocket and lighting the butt, Fox placed the other end in his mouth and began to enjoy it. You probably have no idea, he says, how much better a cigar tastes when smoked in that manner. While he was wondering why people will insist upon burning them the other way the moon — round, yellow, and looking like the bottom of a burnished copper kettle — arose and started west as fast as she could go. Fox sat watching her until she got over his head and he was left in the shadow of the building and then — a very unusual thing for him at that hour — he grew drowsy. For a while longer, nevertheless, he sat with eyes half open watching a thin-winged bat that came whirring about his head in sudden circles, remarking what strange shapes night gave to the currant bushes, wondering if that thing were a skull or only a piece of punk that glowered at him from beneath them, and then went to sleep.

When he awoke he knew it was late, but no more. Fox has been up so much between sunset and sunrise that ordinarily he can tell the time o' night as closely as a farmer can decide that it is dinner time by a squint at the sky. But now, as he looked around, moon and stars had vanished, and it was as black as the wing of a crow. This was because a curtain of clouds had drawn itself across the sky, and so thick were they that not a star could find a crack to put its eye to. The night wind, too, feeling very bad about something, had come from his haunts in nowhere, and was sobbing around the corners, making the sympathetic ash whimper and the tender rose bushes shed a few dewy tears, while from the back of the barn an owl was hooting direfully. Beneath the bushes that evil, skull-like thing still glowered and glowered, from out the darkness a blundering night beetle came and struck him in the face, and at his back something — he thought it was a branch — from time to time swished across the wall like a lashing tail. But at all this a great happiness came over him, for he knows no sweeter music than the sobbing of the belated breeze or the voice of the midnight owl, and as for that thing of glowing eyes and teeth, it was positively fascinating. Then when, a moment later, a damp tree toad fell into his lap from above and he took its cold body in his hand, his happiness became supreme. How it is that people can profess to like hot sunlight, cackling hens and warm, fuzzy kittens, is more than he can comprehend. Personally, he has always believed that they are hypocrites, who only pretend to like such things, because they are fads.

So as he sat, peering about that nothing might escape his eyes, and with his ears set to catch the slightest noise, of a sudden from behind him and inside the laundry came most entrancing sounds! First, there was a series of low swishes, like a snake crawling across leaves, and after that a long, soul-felt, quivering sigh. Deeply interested at once, he dropped the poor, chilled toad into his coat pocket to keep it warm, and, pressing his ear against the clapboards, listened with dilated eyes to the sounds that came from within. For a time all was silence; then they came again, and with them a moaning and groaning, a clank and a rattle, the low scuffling of feet, whispers, gibberish — another sigh. Unable to restrain himself longer Fox arose, gently fitted the key to the rusty lock and stepped within, closing the door behind him.

Inside it was as black as the ultimate cavern of the Pit. Not the ghost of a glimmer stole through a crack, not the dimmest glow through a nail-hole, and when he shut his eyes, as he soon did, it but seemed the lighter. Motionless he stood, listening, expectant, but the sullen silence was that of a place where death alone lived. Patiently he waited, however, while minute after minute crawled away, until finally, hearing nothing, and knowing something of the habits of things of darkness, he sighed. Joy! From the opposite corner it was answered. He sobbed. At his side it was repeated. He gibbered. From behind his back gibberish answered him. Then he sat down upon the floor.

Instantly unseen activity filled the room. Again the scuffling of feet, the sighing and clanking, the sobs, the gibberish. Waiting till it was at its height, he gathered together a handful of matches, struck them all at once, and as they flared up and exposed the room to its uttermost recesses, he looked about eagerly. No living or moving thing greeted his sight. A broken chair or two, some warped wooden tubs, a rusty boiler, a melancholy ruin of a clothes wringer — only that and nothing more. Then the disappointed matches went out in a huff, and as their last flicker died away there came again the moans and clanks and gibberish. Fox was surprised.

Persistently, determinedly, all night long he sat there listening — listening to those uncanny sounds within, and the sobbing wind and slatting sheets of rain without. From the depths of his pocket the tree toad set up a merry croaking, from above drops of water fell with a monotonous drip, drip, drip upon his head, and more than once the swishing feet of the other occupant passed close to him and his face was swept by its filmy garments. Yet when he, quick as a cat, caught at it, it melted in his grasp like a clutched handful of water. Then, just before the sun sat up in bed and thrust one red eye above the rim of the world, the clouds dried their eyes, the wind died with a gasp, and within the room was nothing but a throbbing silence. At this Fox threw open the door and by the morning light scanned the room anew.

Chairs, tubs, boiler and wringer were undisturbed, and he could discover nothing that he had not seen by the flaring light of the matches, except that the walls had been covered with an oxide of chrome yellow, evidently intended to be but an under-coating, yet which, for some reason, had never received a covering.

Much perplexed by the mystery, but fully determined to meet his suffering tenant face to face, Fox went for an electrician, who put a big arc light in the centre of the ceiling and a push-button on the wall. Then, when night again settled over the world with broad pinions spread, he took his chair into the room and patiently sat the night through, hearing not so much as the echo of a groan to cheer him. And for the four succeeding nights he sat in similar unhappiness, but on the fifth — just one week from the first occurrence, a Monday — the ghost came again, and for an hour they groaned and sobbed in unseen comradeship. Then, just at one o'clock — as a rooster crew, a cat squalled, the toads croaked, and the clanking reached its height — Fox, feeling a hang-dog shame at his treachery, pushed the button and the room was instantly a-dazzle with light. Eagerly he swept his gaze around.

Agile as the electric current was, the ghost was quicker. Already it had vanished, riding upon the last departing shadow, but, as Fox had been careful to lock the door, and the windows were boarded up, great was his wonder as to where it had gone. Scarcely believing his eyes, he went around and around the room, peering beneath the tubs, looking into every crack, feeling in his pockets; but, although more than once he thought he heard the scuff of soft feet, no other trace of a visitor could he detect by eyes, ears or nose. At last, realizing that he was thoroughly out-spooked, he turned off the light and went out, locking the door after him.

The next morning Fox visited his friend Hume, who is a scientist, a hypnotist, a spiritualist, and an egotist. Hume listened patiently, while a soul-maddening smile of self-sufficiency came creeping out of the corners of his mouth and spread and spread until his face was thickly plastered with it, and Fox felt that he would gladly pay all his friend's funeral expenses for the exhilarating joy of attending it. Then, by a chain of promises, he led him to the laundry, where Hume looked about, made Fox repeat some of the gibberish he had heard, and then coolly asked him if he wished to see the gibberer. When asked what he thought he was hired for, he merely smirked, and said that nothing would be easier, for a person of some intelligence, to arrange. At that he sent for a white-washer, who soon came and made the yellow walls as white as spotless linen, after which the medium patted Fox on the head patronizingly and, saying that he would come again on the following Monday night, went away, leaving Fox looking for stones to throw.

All the rest of that week Fox kept midnight vigil in vain—sighing, groaning, clanking bits of iron, using all his coaxing wiles—desperate because he could not conjure forth a response, and so forestall the spiritualist, whom he silently called an idiot, and had always secretly despised. On Monday evening he came, serene and exasperating, and promptly at midnight the sounds began. Scarcely had the first clank come to their ears when the medium was upon his feet.

"I thought so," said he, coolly, "It is really the simplest case I have ever had." And with that he turned on the light.

Wild with rage at his insulting tones, Fox looked about, rubbing his eyes and blinking like a bat that flies into a lighted parlor. For a few seconds he saw nothing, and was about to shriek at Hume in triumph and scorn, when his gaze fell upon the farthest corner, and he stood transfixed, staring, with a mouth into which one might have thrust a plum. For in the corner cowered a dimly visible form, clothed in a misty chrome yellow garment that covered it to its sandaled feet and left no portion of its body exposed except its long, transparent, yellow hands.

Then the medium turned out the light. "Come, boy," said he, and he took the arm of Fox, who in a stupor allowed himself to be led away.

"Well," said he, bitterly, about an hour afterward. "Somehow, in some way, it seems, you happened to blunder upon a means of exposing him. I had a better plan myself, but out of courtesy let you try first, and of course, bullhead luck and ignorance came running to your aid, as usual. But what was your silly theory, anyway?"

Hume yawned exasperatingly. "When you first told me about it I remembered that a Chinaman died in that place on a Monday, years ago, while rubbing at his tub. Naturally, then, it was his ghost. When you told me of his being quicker than the electric light I only smiled in secret behind my hand, for there is no fact better known among us scientific mediums than that electricity is fully thirty per cent. quicker than the most acrobatic ghost. However, that has nothing to do with the case, since, as you had the door locked and the windows boarded up, he could not have got out anyway. I had had some experience with Chinese ghosts, and of course knew that they were yellow, upon the same principle that a Caucasian's spirit is white. Therefore, the reason you did not see him was because he happened to exactly match the walls. The sounds you described only confirmed my theory. Very naturally his feet scuffed, because he wore felt sandals, the clanking was the noise of that old wringer, and the gibberish was no doubt very good Chinese. Therefore I had the room white-washed, and of course the ghost became, to a certain extent, visible against that colorless background. I only charge $10 in these rudimental cases."

"You think you are very smart," said Fox. "You can sue me for it. If you can produce the ghost in court I will pay you your bill."

Then Hume departed, fuming.

But Fox got to thinking about it, and the result was that he hunted up a live Chinaman, told him the story, and quoted some of the gibberish from memory. At once the laundryman's face grew intelligent. "Chinaman ghost askee for laundree," said he. "Mucheeworry because no washee-washee."

And so, acting upon the hint, Fox equipped the laundry with soap and water, a new wringer and a basket of soiled linen, and now, on Monday nights, as he sits outside and smokes the wrong end of his cigar, from within there comes, not the sound of grief and the clank of rusty machinery, but instead a low, contented chant of Chinaland and the purr of a brand-new wringer. At the same time, he gets his laundry work done for nothing.

The Patent Envelope.*

BY HENRY GARDNER HUNTING.

IF Jack Redmond had been told, at four and twenty, that happiness, and particularly his happiness, would ever be dependent upon so little a thing as an insignificant piece of steel wire about five inches long and so fine that its other dimension runs too deeply into the fractions of an inch to be stated, he would have laughed his informant to scorn. He was the sort of a man who believed that his happiness depended upon himself and that he was strong enough to defy most circumstances and to secure for himself those things which were essential for his contentment. The one circumstance upon which Redmond had not calculated, however, was the very one which finally brought acknowledgment from him of the extraordinary power of little things outside himself, and the suddenness with which it came jarred him. Harriet Brice refused him.

Miss Brice was a tall girl with hair the color of oak leaves in the late fall and eyes to match, deep red-brown, and the eyes had a light in them to win or wring a man's heart. Redmond loved her. That was a cause for happiness to him and one of the reasons why he was so sure of himself and of things. When she refused him it naturally took some of his assurance from him and some of his buoyancy and life, too.

It isn't necessary to relate why Miss Brice turned Jack Redmond down when she did. It had looked to people — and to Jack — as if she cared a little more for him than for most other men, but she did not appear to care enough to marry him, and that ended it for Jack. He had spent a long vacation at her side in a winter resort in the South. When his hope of happiness received its damper he went back to Chicago and his business, the prosaic, though profitable, occupation of a commission merchant.

* Copyright, 1903, by The Shortstory Publishing Company. All rights reserved.

* The writer of this story received a cash prize of $125 in THE BLACK CAT story contest ending February 26, 1903.

As for Miss Harriet, she did not seem to find the Southern resort amusing long after Redmond had left, and so she went North, too. Her home was in Ann Arbor, Mich., where her people were living while Harriet's younger brother pursued studies in Michigan's university. Ann Arbor is a good two hundred and forty miles from Chicago.

Miss Brice had spent a gay winter. Indeed, most of her time was always very full of pleasure and happiness, as was natural to a young woman who had seen but two winters in society. But on her way to the Northern home this condition of mind did not continue. The gray clouds which hung in the April sky of Ohio and of Michigan seemed to make her forget the color of Southern sunshine. There were some things, too, which she would like to forget — or thought she would — which were persistent in monopolizing her thoughts.

There was the fragrance of the jasmine — not that she did not like the jasmine, for she was fond of it — but it had been Redmond's favorite, too, and she thought of him when she thought of the jasmine flowers. So she did not wish to remember the jasmine — or thought she didn't. Then there was the recollection of exciting rides and of a strong hand under her foot as she sprang into the saddle, which came back without cause or excuse. There was the sparkle of confident eyes which had looked into hers, so confident that she had resented it while she liked it. And lastly, there was the paleness under the sunburn on Jack Redmond's cheek when she had said no to his eager question. And that least pleasant memory was the hardest to put away.

Miss Brice was a girl of sense. If she had been sentimental, probably the romance which seemed now to have come to so blank an end would have been cherished longer by her. With her it had been simply a matter of believing that she did not care enough for Jack Redmond to marry him. She liked him very much — very much, she admitted to herself. It had been pleasant to have his attention and, yes, his devotion. She recognized now that she should miss him. She did not like to think that. She did not care to think that any man was essential to her happiness, and yet — she wondered why she remembered him so much more distinctly than the others.

Redmond was a big fellow. He was jolly, full of life and heartiness. He could find fun everywhere and good in everything. His fun never had a sting in it for any one and his sympathy was broad enough for all. How jolly he was to every one he met. How the Southern people seemed to like him. How the guests chose him among the first when making up excursions from the beach hotel, and how the servants were always at his call. Then he had a serious side, too. She liked that rather best, though his fun and good humor were so delightful. She enjoyed the grave steadiness of his look when he talked of things he cared for and of things which she suggested. She liked the respect which he accorded her preferences, her opinions and even her whims. She liked his decisive replies to questions and his reserve on subjects of controversy. She liked Redmond — no doubt of that. But she did not love him. Of that she was positive — or thought she was.

The train which bore Miss Brice toward home in the afternoon of the second day was delayed in one of the northern Ohio towns. A freight was stalled ahead and a long wait resulted. The girl sat at the window of the coach and looked out steadily at the not enchanting view. A water-tank, a bit of village street and the great blank side of a newly-built frame hotel were for the better part of two long hours all that lay before her eyes.

More than one person in the car looked often at the sweet-faced young traveller who seemed to find such absorbing interest in the blank outlook. But their glances did not disturb her, for what Miss Brice saw was not bare clapboards with a single coat of white paint upon them, but green woods and mountain sides and hilly roads, and a tall young man with very broad shoulders who sat his horse erect and smiled at her in jolly comradery. How they did ride those wooded roads and mountain sides! How they had raced on old Thorn Ridge, and how they had sat, too, on the high bank of Colron Lake and watched the sunsets — the glorious sunsets back of Cherry Valley! She had loved those times. It was wonderful what good times they had been — and how dull the present.

When the train started north again it brought recollection of the present with a sudden jolt, but Miss Brice, after a hasty look about her, returned to her watch of outside scenery. As she swept northward the gray clouds drew together and evening shadows commenced to creep over the landscape. When the Michigan line was crossed the sun had set. The train stopped at a little station where a bell rang to announce supper to hungry travellers, but Miss Brice was not thinking of supper.

There was something desolate to her about that quiet evening hour, despite the freshness of spring in the air. There was something in the fading light which suggested hopelessness. And there was something in the home life to which she was going back which now looked desolate and hopeless, too. It was this home life, so free, so comfortable, so happy, of which she had thought when Jack Redmond had asked her to leave it for him, and it was to it that she had clung with such unwillingness to give it up. It had suddenly lost its charm. Why was it? she asked herself. Was it the gay winter that had made a quiet summer at home appear so dull in prospect? That could not be, for she had been glad to get away from the resort where all the gay times had passed and, in retrospect, it was not the place that attracted her. Could it be — was it — but she would not ask herself the question.

She leaned her face upon her hand. It was burning hot and her heart was beating with a strange, swift beat. Could it be? Did she love Jack Redmond after all? Her eyes turned from the down-settling night for another swift look about the car. Had they guessed her thoughts? No, no one was looking. She turned to the night again and faced her question. Is it true? Her head sank slowly down till her forehead touched the cool glass of the window and the hot tears slowly welled up in her eyes while her throat was full and parched. The hand with which she pressed her handkerchief to her eyes trembled. She knew.

"Ann Arbor! Change for Detroit, Jackson, Kalamazoo and Chicago!" shouted the brakeman as the train swept at last into the home station. Miss Brice took up her little grip and left the car. On the platform she met her brother affectionately and then drove home with him in quiet, glad that he was such an unob-servant boy. Mr. and Mrs. Brice were not at home. They were in the East, where Mrs. Brice had accompanied her husband on a business trip. Harold, the younger brother, had been keeping bachelor hall with only the cook and the man of all work to look after his wants. Miss Brice welcomed the thought of being alone, but she wished that her maid, now visiting in her home town of Chelsea, a few miles away, were with her. For this reason it pleased her that the girl had anticipated this want to the extent of writing that she would come at once if wanted. Miss Brice read the letter, and though she was not a selfish person, and did not wish to shorten Marie's vacation time, she did want the girl. So it was that, after debating the matter, she wrote a brief message and sent it by Harold to the telegraph office.

"Come to me at once, if convenient," was how the message read. It was characteristic of Miss Brice, this consideration for her maid.

.

Mr. Jack Redmond sat up from his big arm chair in his bachelor quarters in a Chicago apartment house and rubbed his eyes. He had been asleep and dreaming. It had been a pleasant dream—something about mountains and long vistas of dirt roads through overarching trees as they look from a horse's back, and there lingered with him a consciousness that he had been enjoying the scenery and the air—enjoying them very much indeed because some one else who seemed to have been with him had been enjoying them also. He came back to consciousness with a sense of cold desolateness surrounding him despite the fire on the hearth and the goodly physical comforts around him. The consciousness that it had been only a dream struck a quick chill to his heart and as he sat up to answer the knock at his door which had aroused him his face settled into lines which had been strange to it two weeks before.

"A telegram for you, sir," said the hall-boy respectfully, and Redmond took the message in and back to the fire to read it. He pulled the little wire which stripped the envelope open, and held the yellow sheet to the light.

MR. JOHN REDMOND, Blank Street, Chicago. Come to me at once, if convenient. HARRIET BRICE.

Redmond stared at the sheet in amazement. Was he still dreaming, then? He read it again. No, there was the message, clear and cold, in a clean-cut, round hand. He looked again at the address. It was for him, all straight enough. Yet it was inconceivable, incomprehensible. He turned the electric switch beside the mantel and the incandescents flashed up. He held the telegram in both hands tremblingly and read it again in the strong light. There was no mistake. He was awake and there in his hands lay the message which five minutes before even his dreaming brain could not have conceived.

Redmond was not an excitable nor a foolish fellow, but he was a very human and very much alive young man, and so what he did next with that bit of yellow paper it isn't necessary to relate. It is enough to say that it had suddenly grown precious to him.

It was too late for the midnight train. His watch told him that, and the next train would leave at half-past seven in the morning. He was not cool. He was grandly, gloriously excited, but he was clear-headed enough to pack a small grip and dress properly. Then he read the message again.

"If convenient," he muttered, repeating the last words. "If convenient! Ye gods!"

Miss Brice's maid had not reached her mistress at five in the afternoon following the latter's return to her home. Harriet was mildly surprised at this, but looked for a letter of explanation. She did not go out and no one had come to the house. Harold had been away most of the day and she was alone.

The sound of the door-bell mingled with the chime of the little clock on the mantel in her room as it struck the hour and she was not sure at first that she had heard a ring. Then she stepped to the stairs and looked down. Yes, there was a shadow against the glass. It must be Marie returning. She ran lightly down and opened the door. She was sure it was Marie, though it seemed odd that the maid had not used her key.

A tall young man with very broad shoulders stood in the porch. He was taking off his hat with a grave smile and looking at her expectantly. It was Jack Redmond!

Harriet Brice was a well-bred girl, usually self-possessed and strong in a gentle dignity of manner, proof against ordinary jars and surprises, but for the moment her self-possession deserted her. She stared, literally.

"Mr. Redmond," she managed to say after what seemed to her in looking back upon it an almost interminable pause.

Jack was smiling his strong, confident smile and he took her tardily proffered hand and pressed it, ever so lightly.

"I am so glad to see you," she said in what she meant to be a conventional manner as she ushered him into the library. She wondered if her voice shook. She was trembling. It was so sudden, this invasion of her stronghold by this great fellow, whose errand she could only guess.

"I am glad to be here," said Jack simply. To him her welcome for some reason did not seem cold.

She turned and looked at him and her eyes were full of a wonderful light. She little knew that happiness in his presence was written in them as plainly as man could ask. And Redmond saw. His heart leaped with a great bound.

"Harriet," he said, with instant, swift, uncontrollable impulse. "I cannot help it," he added quickly; "you have let me see you again. Is it that—is it—? May I hope now? Will you forgive me for speaking so? I am so selfish, but it means so much to me."

He advanced a step toward her. The girl looked at him, half frightened but helpless. She strove to control her beating heart and her speechless lips, but her eyes were brimming with tears and she could not stop him. She was silent.

"Harriet," cried Jack. He came swiftly now and caught her hands. "I love you. Oh, dear girl, I love you. Can you not tell me that I have a chance?"

The girl's face was dyed with the rich color. "Oh, Jack," she cried, "don't. It isn't fair. You are—you—" She covered her face with her hands.

If Redmond had been less of a man he might have stopped in consideration of her agitation, but he was a whole man with a boundless love for the girl before him. He did not draw back. He put his arms about her and drew her to him, and then he held her close.

Time is nothing to lovers. It might have been a half hour—it might have been an hour—after Jack's arrival, before it came—the explanation. But it followed on a remark of Jack's, of course.

"And to think," he said contentedly, while he watched her adjust a wayward coil of hair, "to think that I should probably have been in New York to-night — for I was intending to go East to-day — but for your message. I —"

"My message! What message? Why, Jack, what do you mean?"

Redmond looked at her in wonder. "Why, your telegram — the wire you sent me."

"Telegram! I sent you no telegram."

Jack stared again. "No telegram? Why, what — what do you call this?" He pulled the precious dispatch from his pocket and looked at it hesitatingly with a sudden lack of confidence. She took it from him and read it quickly.

"Jack Redmond!" she exclaimed. "That message? That's — that's the message I sent — why, yes, the message I sent to my maid." She gazed at him with sudden suspicion and then examined the yellow sheet again. "But it's addressed to you," she exclaimed, astonished. "I never — oh, Jack, I didn't. You didn't think I sent for you?"

Redmond returned her look, puzzled. "I sure did," he said simply. "It looks like it. It certainly reads that way."

It certainly did. To her it was amazing; to him incomprehensible. Then she told him her story, the story of Marie and the summons home, and then they tried to understand it, to solve the riddle. But they couldn't. Redmond evolved a theory, but he was too gallant to advance it — yet. He was not conceited enough to believe that thought of him had monopolized her mind to such an extent. He had known girls, and men too, absent-mindedly to write their thoughts rather than some other thing that was intended.

They did not solve it, but their happiness was not dampened for that.

When Redmond left the Brice home it was evening. He was the possessor of a happiness bigger than any other he had ever known. Because it was so big and because he was so sure in it there was room left for a little curiosity and that curiosity led him straight to the office of the telegraph company. It so happened that for Redmond's purpose he arrived at the office at the right moment.

The wire chief from Detroit was within and he and the local operator were discussing a matter which interested them greatly. So deeply were they engaged, indeed, that they did not cease their talk at once on his entrance.

"Most curious thing I ever saw," the wire chief was saying. "You see the envelope lay directly across the two keys at Whittemore, and switched the message so that this young woman did not get it, and the telegram that was intended for her went to the man in Chicago."

Redmond caught the words. "What's that about switched messages?" he asked. They turned toward him.

"Why," said the wire chief, "we had an odd happening on the line last night at Whittemore Lake, the station next west of here, between here and Chelsea, the most curious thing I have ever known in telegraphy. You see, there are a number of parallel wires running through here from Detroit to Chicago. Two of these wires run through two separate sets of instruments at Whittemore. The operator there last night unwittingly placed one of these patent envelopes, with the wire in the bottom by which to open it, across these two instruments in such a way as to transfer a passing message from its proper wire to the other and thus to a destination for which it was not intended."

Jack laughed. "That is curious," he said. "But how do you account for the receiving operator's failure to correct such an error?"

"That's the odd part of it, sir," returned the wire chief. "You see, it is certain that two messages were being sent simultaneously, one on wire No. 1, from Detroit for Chicago, and the other on wire No. 2 from Ann Arbor for Chelsea. The sending operators apparently concluded the addresses of their respective messages at the same moment. One was to a young woman at Chelsea, as our record shows, though she never received it, for her end of the wire was cut out by the accident; the other was for a Mr. John Redmond, of Chicago. At the exact moment when the senders concluded the addresses of their messages, the operator at Whittemore, all unconscious of the consequences of his simple act, laid this envelope, with its harmless but wonderfully potential little wire, across the keys. The wire in the envelope caught the current and just transferred the Chelsea message to the Chicago address. The young woman at Chelsea received no message, for her end of the wire was dead. Mr. Redmond, if he got her telegram, received a summons to Ann Arbor intended for the girl. We do not yet know that Mr. Redmond received the message."

Jack took a yellow envelope from his pocket and examined it critically. "Yes," he said dryly, "he got it."

The two men looked at him interestedly.

"You, sir?" asked the operator.

Jack nodded.

"I hope it did not make trouble for you, sir."

"No," returned Jack, smiling again, "but it wonderfully changed the plans of the young lady who sent the message to Chelsea."

Redmond put the yellow envelope once more into his pocket, lighted a cigar and nodded good-night to the men.

"Good-natured for a man who has had a run of two hundred and fifty miles on a false summons," said the operator as Jack closed the door.

"Yes, he's good-natured enough about it," returned his superior. "But wait till the girl hears about it. It'll be different then."

"Yes, there'll be the deuce to pay then," said the operator.

But he was wrong. There wasn't.

The Master's Curse.*

BY HENRY ADELBERT THOMPSON.

ARKINSON and Eastman are having it out to-night."

I looked at my host inquiringly, quite failing to comprehend the meaning of his remark. We were seated in what he called his library, a snug room, given over as much to guns, fishing tackle and boxes of cigars as to books. The mistress of the mansion, a most gracious, well-poised and handsome lady, just past middle age, had said good-night soon after dinner. We had pushed our chairs back into the shadows to escape the heat of a fire of pine logs which, piled high on the andirons of the wide fireplace, were blazing furiously. Outside, a roaring gale beat upon the old-fashioned, rambling house, rattled at the windows, howled in the corners, shouted down the chimneys. All day long the wind, which arose before dawn, had steadily increased in violence, driving great banks of low-hanging clouds in upon the land and tearing the surface of the Chesapeake to shreds of spray. At nightfall, instead of abating as usual, the wind grew angrier; and, at times, the house literally trembled, as if frightened by its attacks.

The Honorable William Walker, my host, was an old country lawyer, with whom, at one time, I had been associated in some troublesome and tedious litigation before the Supreme Court of the United States. He was a leonine sort of man, with a great mane of white hair continually falling down over his eyes. Since the beginning of our acquaintance he had not failed, each November, sending me an invitation to his home, on the Eastern Shore of Virginia, for a week's duck shooting. This was the first time I had been able, by accepting his hospitality, to renew my friendship with a remarkable man.

"I beg pardon," said Mr. Walker, "I overlooked the fact that you are — naturally — unfamiliar with our provincial way of putting things. I meant, merely, that a great storm is driving in, from the west, across the bay."

* Copyright, 1908, by The Shortstory Publishing Company. All rights reserved.

"Please tell me the story," I said.

"You wouldn't believe it if I did," replied my host. "You are saturated with the skepticism which pervades the atmosphere of Washington. There, at the Capital, they have faith in no person or thing — God or Satan."

"I believe in both," I asseverated, hastening to disclaim alliance with such infidelity.

"Then I will tell you the origin of the saying, 'Parkinson and Eastman are having it out to-night.'"

"Many years ago, when I was a young man, Commodore Parkinson was a great, domineering person, who, for a half-century, had ruled his house, servants and sailors with the undisputed authority of a despot. Everyone called him Commodore because, as I fancy, much of his large fortune was invested in schooners, trading up and down the Bay and to the West Indies. He lived at Pungoteague, two miles down the beach from here, in an immense, Colonial house, built so close to the water that the tide, when the wind helped it, rose inside the paling about his lawn.

"The Commodore never had children of his own. After the death of his wife, however, he adopted the daughter of a distant relative, who grew into one of the most beautiful girls I have ever seen. Margaret Parkinson was a toast that brought all men to their feet, up and down the Shore, a generation ago. But, in spite of the adulation showered upon her, her disposition was simplicity itself. She did not seem in the least affected either by the sense of her personal charm or by the prospect of becoming a great heiress; for it was generally understood that her foster father purposed leaving his entire possessions to his adopted daughter.

"It is unnecessary to say that the Commodore's relatives, by marriage, regarded Margaret with definite disapproval; but the old man held their opinions in supreme disdain. But one person could claim blood kindred with him — Calvert Eastman, the son of his only sister. There was really not much to be said for Eastman. From a puny, cowardly boy he grew up into a tall, thincheated, cadaverous man, with shifting eyes and a tendency to whine. I saw a lot of the fellow in those days. He was a lawyer, and his office was just across the street from mine. I never liked or trusted him. The Commodore always despised him; and after Eastman, in his unctuous, sneaking way, courted Margaret Parkinson — although he was sent to the right about in cavalier fashion — the old man simply hated his nephew, and raged, like a trapped lion, whenever his name was mentioned.

“I was the Commodore’s legal adviser; and for years kept ding-ing away at him to make his will, but could never quite prevail over his procrastination. He seemed, like many other men, to entertain the superstitious notion that executing one’s will was equivalent to signing one’s death warrant. ‘Bless my soul, Walker,’ he used to say, ‘you’re on the last will and testament business again. Do I look as though I was about to give up the ghost? All in due time, my son. My father lived to ninety-four, and my grandfather passed his eighty-seventh mile-stone. We Parkinsons are tough. It’s hard to kill us. Still, that document ought to be drawn up and deposited in your safe. The next time we get together we will attend to it.’ When the next time came, my client would exhibit an equal disinclination to reduce his testamentary wishes to writing.

“When Commodore Parkinson, in his sixty-fourth year — after cursing the captain of a dismantled schooner for allowing his masts to be blown overboard — was stricken with paralysis, I was in Richmond, pleading a case before the state Supreme Court. The sailors on the vessel carried their helpless master from the wharf to the house. Though hardly able to move, something of the characteristic dominance of the man remained; and when he brokenly insisted that he wanted a lawyer to draw his will, a neighbor volunteered to bring me. Finding that I was away, the messenger, as the most feasible thing under the circumstances, secured the services of Calvert Eastman.

“The servants who were in attendance when the attorney entered the room where the Commodore lay — the doctor had not yet arrived, and Margaret was on a visit in Richmond — afterwards told me that the old man swore roundly at his nephew, and ordered him out of the house. When, however, it was explained that I was absent from home and would not return for several days, he accepted the situation; and Eastman, producing writing materials and seating himself at a table, asked his uncle to state what disposition he wished to make of his property. The Commodore lay with closed eyes for a few moments. Then, by an almost superhuman effort of will, he managed to raise himself to a half-sitting posture, and, glaring at his nephew, pronounced such a strange, weird imprecation — half curse, half threat — that the servants moaned in fear, and the housekeeper, not entirely an ignorant woman, declared that every word of it was burned into her brain and that she shuddered every time it was recalled to her memory.

“Calvert,” said Commodore Parkinson, his voice vibrant with intensity, ‘you know I despise you. I believe you would lie or cheat or be up to any devilment that would put a dollar into your rapacious pocket. I didn’t send for you to write my will; but, since you are here, and Walker is not, you must do it. Let me tell you though, before you begin, that if you don’t set down exactly what I say, you will wish you had. I know I’m going to die; but I will come back after you; I will kill you; I will follow you even after you are dead; damn you, if you deceive me, I’ll chase you through all eternity!’

“After this outburst, which Eastman received in silence, the old man grew quite calm, and proceeded to dictate the terms of his will. They were very simple. A number of bequests were made to old family servants; then he directed that the entire remainder of his estate, real and personal, should go to his adopted daughter, Margaret Parkinson, and that ‘The family attorney, his esteemed friend, William Walker,’ should be the executor.

“The housekeeper noticed that the Commodore, during the strain of dictating his wishes, weakened rapidly. When he had finished, he was quite exhausted, and lay still, with a deathlike pallor on his face and his eyes closed. Eastman, no doubt, was keenly aware of his uncle’s prostrated condition, and took advantage of it to insert a clause in the document he was preparing. This insertion provided that the whole of the Commodore’s estate should go to Margaret Parkinson, contingent upon her marrying Calvert Eastman within a year; otherwise, should the testatrix fail to obey the testator in this particular, the entire property should 'revert to the testator's beloved nephew, Calvert Eastman.'

"It was a bold play, one worthy of a higher type of villain, and Eastman carried it through successfully. When the finished will was placed in the Commodore's hands, the old man's eyes had weakened past the possibility of reading for himself. This task the attorney undertook for his uncle, enunciating aloud the prolix, legal verbiage, inseparable from all such papers in those days.

"'Oh, damn that verbose nonsense, broke in the Commodore, testily, 'Have you carried out my wishes exactly, without subtraction or addition?'

"'Yes, sir; I have; to the last infinitesimal. This testament devises just what you have demanded, and only that,' replied the lawyer, lying glibly and unequivocally.

"'Then let me sign it, quickly.'

"The pen was placed in his hand, the almost inert body raised a little, and Commodore Parkinson managed to scrawl his name. Two of the white servants signed as witnesses.

"'Now take that will to the county seat, and place it on file," said the sick man. 'My steward will pay you a fee of a hundred dollars. Get out!'

"Eastman stuffed the paper into his pocket and left the house. Commodore Parkinson lay back on his pillow a moment. Then his face contorted in a sudden spasm, his great frame stiffened, and then relaxed again slowly in the limpness of death. The strain had brought on a second stroke of paralysis, which had been instantly fatal.

"On the next day but one — Margaret Parkinson and I having both arrived in the meantime — the Commodore was buried in the family graveyard, a picketed enclosure, located very near the edge of the water and not above five hundred feet north of the house. It is one of our Virginia peculiarities that we wish to bury our dead in soil which belongs to us — and belonged to them.

"On the second succeeding afternoon — having, in the meantime, visited the registrar's office and examined the Commodore's will — I started for the Parkinson place, with the embarrassing duty in prospect of telling Margaret that she must marry Calvert Eastman within the year or find herself penniless. It was a cold, raw, gusty November day, with a drizzling rain blowing in from the southeast. The early darkness fell before I had accomplished half the ten miles distance; but my horse was sure-footed, and I pressed on at a moderately rapid pace. The lights of the Parkinson mansion were just visible through the gloom, when Cricket suddenly shied, bounding to the side of the road with an unexpectedness that nearly unseated me. I recovered my poise in the saddle, spoke soothingly to the mare, shook the reins and gently urged her forward; but she stood stock still, with high-tossed head, inhaling great breaths of air, each one of which was followed by a terrified snort and an accession of trembling. For some moments I continued the contest, but only succeeded in coaxing Cricket to advance a few feet. Suddenly the mare stopped dead still and stiffened to rigidity; then, quick as a flash, she reared, whirled on her hind legs as on a pivot, and would have bolted had I not brought her up with a firm hand. Realizing that there was probably some good reason for such an extreme display of fear by an animal usually courageous, I dismounted, tied my horse to the fence and went forward to investigate. The darkness, owing to the fog and clouds, had become so intense that I was obliged literally to feel my way, sometimes groping with extended hands for a possible broken-down wagon, and again thrusting the toe of a riding-boot ahead lest I should stumble over something lying on the ground. After advancing in this slow fashion for some thirty paces, my foot encountered something. I stooped and felt it with my hands, and thrills of horror, like closing, icy fingers, gripped my heart. It was the body of a man, lying directly across the road. Fumbling for my match box, I found it and struck a lucifer. The wind extinguished the flame almost instantly, but the momentary glow enabled me to recognize the white, distorted, upturned face of the dead man. It was Calvert Eastman!

"Hastily, and with an immense distaste for the task, I dragged the body to the side of the road and laid it on the turf. Then, leading Cricket past the place, I mounted and galloped to the house, where my pale countenance and discomposed manner instantly showed Margaret that something was wrong. When informed of my gruesome discovery on the highway, the girl was evidently shocked by the news, but maintained her quiet demeanor. She told me that her cousin — so she called him — had spent the greater part of the afternoon at the mansion and had left just after dark. She had parted with him at the parlor door and, a few moments later, had heard the hoofs of his horse pounding on the oyster shells of the driveway.

“Accompanied by several negroes, with lanterns and an improvised stretcher, I returned to the scene of the accident. An examination of the marks in the road, made as carefully as the wind-blown lights would allow, enabled me to determine the history of the occurrence. Eastman's mount had reared, lost his balance, fallen backward upon his rider and broken the man's neck; after which the horse, probably unhurt, had scrambled to his feet and ran away. What had frightened the animal is a mystery that has remained unsolved until this day. Of course the negroes and ignorant white people had their superstitions aroused and readily explained the matter on supernatural grounds.”

My host paused and gazed meditatively at the fire. Outside, the wind continued to howl dismally, as though a fight between two monstrous demons had progressed to the point where, being in pain, they were giving tongue.

“We carried the body of Calvert Eastman to the house,” resumed Mr. Walker, “and laid it in the long drawing-room — the same room from which the corpse of Commodore Parkinson had been so recently borne. It was useless to think of securing the services of an undertaker that night, so we composed the form of the dead man as decently as possible, arranging the rain-soaked garments and removing the clinging mud from his face. The housekeeper assisted me in these simple duties. The woman was strangely excited — almost distraught. Over and over again, as she moved about, I heard her mutter to herself, ‘It's the Master's curse! It's the Master's curse!’ Perhaps it was the woman's manner as well as the words she uttered, but something chilling seemed to creep slowly out of the darkness behind me and to touch me in a soft, enfolding, horribly disagreeable way. U-g-h! I remember it yet.

“As soon as our unpleasant task was finished, I was glad enough to abandon the society of the dead for that of the living. I found

Margaret in the sitting-room across the hall. She was seated before a leaping, open fire, the glow of which was very grateful to me at the moment. I drew a chair forward, and we talked for some time in low tones. Our theme was, of course, the accident which had resulted in Eastman's death; and I told her how, in my opinion, it had occurred. It did not seem advisable, just then, to raise the question of how it would affect her own fortunes.

"An hour of this and other conversation passed rapidly. The genial light of the fire and the calm, sensible temperament of my companion, combined to revive my sombre spirits. I even ventured an occasional smile and a few subdued pleasantries; for, after all, the dead man across the hall was nothing to me.

"Suddenly Margaret lifted her hand. I heard a crash in a distant part of the house, and immediately became aware that the storm had increased to a gale. Windows were rattling, shutters were banging, and the voices of the negroes, calling to one another in the quarters, were blurred to an indistinguishable murmur in the shrieking of the wind. But storms were no unusual things in the experience either of Margaret or myself, and we paid only casual attention to the accelerating commotion until, a quarter of an hour later, Scipio, the old family butler, peered in at the door and said, 'Miss Mahgret, de water's a poahin' in de cellah.'"

"'What!' I cried, rising and crossing to a window overlooking the Bay. The shutter, for some moments, resisted my efforts, but I finally opened it. An astonishing sight greeted me. The moon had risen; and, though it was not visible, it lent a soft glow to the darkness. The lawn, running down from the front of the house to the beach, had disappeared. It was merely a sheet of tossing waves, which, even as I looked, began to dash and break against the walls of the building. Knowing something of the Bay, I realized that this was unprecedented. The incoming tide, driven by the gale, was at least four or five feet above the highest water marks in the neighborhood, and was still rising. I called to Margaret to come and look, at the same time assuring her that there was not the slightest reason for apprehension. It was impossible that the water should rise high enough to damage the solid, massive, stone house, though it would probably flood the cellar. I suggested that we go to the kitchen and see how the negroes were faring. We found the entire colony from the quarters huddled about the big fire, the women greatly excited and volubly talking, the men covering their alarm with smirks and grins. As we returned through the main hall of the house I noticed that water was beginning to enter beneath the front door. Telling Margaret to go into the sitting room, I ran back to the kitchen and ordered Left-handed Sam, who was a fairly good boat builder, to bring the necessary materials and caulk the crack between the door and the sill.

"Sam insisted on going to his cabin for the blunt-edged chisel and some oakum, pickings, without which, he averred, he could not 'chink' the cracks effectively. I watched him as he waded toward the quarters. The water had completely surrounded the house but, here at the back, owing to the upward slope of the ground, it was not more than knee deep. Immediately at my feet, where it was protected by the building, it was comparatively calm, but to right and left it was being torn to shreds by the furious wind. The force of the gale had, if such a thing were possible, doubled in a quarter of an hour.

"Sam was absent only a few minutes. On his return we repaired, with two other of the men, to the front hall. The housekeeper was there, making ineffective efforts to stay the inrush of the water, which was now spurting in a sheet beneath the door. I told the woman to stand aside, and let Sam see what could be done.

"At that moment some heavy, floating object was hurled against the door with a crash which threatened to splinter the thick, oaken panels. Sam, with his 'pickin's' in one hand and the caulking iron in the other, paused and waited. Almost immediately a second impact came, and I really thought the door would fly inward from its hinges, so tremendous was the force of the wave. 'Marse Walker,' said the negro, 'hit ain't no sort'er use chinkin' dis doah if hit's goin' ter be bus' open by dat log.'

"The truth of the observation was obvious, but I was loath to send any of the men around to the front of the house, to grapple with the log and steer it to a place of safety, fearing they would run the double risk of being drowned and of having their brains dashed out by any floating thing that might chance to strike them in the darkness. On the other hand, I knew what damage a floating log or beam might do the house when hurled by such a storm. It would be a veritable and powerful battering ram. A third crash emphasized the necessity of doing something at once.

"'Marse Walker,' said Sam, as I hesitated, 'reckon we'uns 'ud better open de doah an' let dat log come right in de hall. Better hab hit lyin' quiet in heah dan knockin' de house ter pieces.'

"'Of course, Sam,' I assented, comprehending the feasibility of the plan. 'You and Bill stand behind the door, ready to close it again. Jim, you grab the log, if it happens to jam in the doorway, and drag it inside. Now!'

"The door swung open, almost hurling the two men off their feet, as they attempted to check its slamming. A blinding dash of spray and a deluge of water burst through the aperture. Then, gliding down the inner slope of a wave which bore it, a horrible, oblong, black thing was carried into the hall and thrown crashing on the floor.

"Jim, the younger negro, fairly screamed with terror. Sam went down on his knees and began to pray. The housekeeper gave one look, cried out in a terrible voice, 'The Master's curse!' and fell in a dead faint. I ran to the sitting room door and held it shut. Margaret was fumbling with the knob on the other side. 'Go away! Go away!' I cried. 'You must not come out here just now. Promise me that you will not try to do so!' Something in my tones must have convinced her that I meant precisely what I said, for she promised readily enough, and I heard her moving away, across the room.

"I shook my fist menacingly at Jim, seized Sam by the collar, jerked him unceremoniously to his feet and whispered my orders. Fortunately the instinct of obedience in the negroes overcame, for the moment, their superstitious fears. Together we lifted the splintered coffin of Commodore Parkinson and carried it into the drawing-room, where we set it down beside the body of Calvert Eastman.

"'Gord-a-mighty!' I heard Left-handed Sam mutter to himself, 'Ole Marse come ter git him, laik he say he would!'

"I think that is all the story," continued my host, after pausing to fill his pipe. "It was, of course, impossible to keep the strange experiences of that night from the public, and it instantly became a popularly accepted theory that the old Commodore, in pursuance of his threat, had killed Eastman on the highway and had then, summoning wind and wave to aid him, left his grave and floated back to his house in order to keep at close quarters with his enemy. The body had really been washed out of the grave by the high tide, which surpassed all previous records in that neighborhood. Soon, when an unusually violent storm was blowing, people began to say, 'Parkinson and Eastman are having it out to-night.'

"A strange story," I remarked, "and one which, barring the element of the supernatural, it would be difficult to explain."

"One of the advantages possessed by educated people," returned Mr. Walker, "is that they do not feel under the intellectual necessity of explaining all things. They are content to contemplate a coincidence simply as a coincidence — a mystery simply as a mystery."

"What became of the Commodore's estate?" I asked, purely professional in my interest.

"It went to Margaret under the terms of the will, Eastman's relatives contesting her rights. They set up the claim that, as no marriage had taken place between Calvert Eastman and Margaret Parkinson within a year from the execution of the testament, the estate reverted to Eastman and through him to his legal heirs. The Court, however, held that the failure to comply with the terms of the will must be attributed to Eastman, there being nothing which showed that Margaret had not stood ready to fulfil the Commodore's wishes whenever called upon to do so; and that, under those circumstances, she should not be made to suffer for Eastman's default. It is a decision which will repay your reading. You will find it in the Eleventh Volume of the Virginia Reports."

"And what became of Margaret Parkinson?" I asked.

"She has been Mrs. William Walker for a little more than thirty-six years now."

"Pshaw!" I ejaculated, "I might have anticipated that."

A Little Transaction in Real Estate.*

BY ALEXANDER RICKETTS.

GEARHART was busily engaged in calculating the stresses for a new steel bridge he was designing when Rackstraw unceremoniously burst into his office. Jim Gearhart hates to be disturbed when wrapped up in complicated computations like that, so he scowled viciously as he jerked up his head to see what all kinds of idiot had dared do it, but one look at the other's face checked the angry words upon his lips.

"Why, old man, what's shaken your nerve like this?" he asked.

"Oh, I'm having a terrible time out where I live, a terrible time," replied Rackstraw, wiping the clammy sweat from his forehead with fingers that trembled so he could hardly hold his handkerchief.

"All suburbanites do, according to the papers," laughed Gearhart.

"But this is really awful, awful," insisted Rackstraw. "I can't keep a servant on the place, my wife's on the verge of hysterics, the children scream at the slightest sound, thinking it's an ogre coming to devour them, and you can see for yourself what a nervous wreck I am. So I've come to you as a last hope, Jim. For God's sake, don't disappoint me. If you can't furnish some rational explanation of the strangest, most mysterious affliction ever happened to a man, I'll go raving crazy — I and all my family."

"What is it?" asked Gearhart, curiously.

"My house won't stand still. It turns and twists around to all points of the compass like a weather-vane," replied Rackstraw, solemnly. "Either that, or else the whole landscape slides and slithers around it, irresponsibly."

"What?" ejaculated Gearhart, eyeing the other carefully.

* Copyright, 1908, by The Shortstory Publishing Company. All rights reserved.

"Oh, I knew you wouldn't believe it. Last week I wouldn't have believed such a thing possible myself. I can hardly believe it's so now sitting here quietly telling about it. But as I am a living man it is true," asserted Rackstraw, vehemently. "It began Sunday night. We went to bed as usual that night, nothing disturbed us, but in the morning we found that, instead of facing the road as it always had, the house had swung clear around and was facing directly away from it. We couldn't believe our eyes, but it was so. The next morning it faced up the road, the next down the road, and this morning it again faces the road. And there's no violence or noise about it; there's just a slight lifting sensation, and then the house swings around and sinks down again, leaving you sick and dizzy and bewildered. The servants all left at once, claiming it is bewitched, my wife and children are scared almost out of their wits, and you have no idea what a dreadful feeling of insecurity it gives you. Nothing seems firm and stable any more. Why, every time I put my foot down I half expect this old earth of ours to bring up with a jolt and begin whirling around the other way."

"See here, Rackstraw, are you sure you haven't got 'em?" demanded Gearhart, with an incredulous smile.

"Would all my family have 'em, would the servants have 'em?" cried Rackstraw, hotly. "Why, I made the last payment on the seventy-five hundred I gave for the place only last week, but I'll sell it now for the five hundred. I'll give it away or abandon it if you can't discover what agency, human or superhuman, is spinning it around with the ease I would a top. Come on out there with me now, old chap, and see for yourself, won't you?"

"I will," said Gearhart, convinced at last that there must be some foundation for the other's extraordinary story, and keenly curious to investigate it for himself as well as for his friend's peace of mind.

As they drove up to the house he carefully noted it and its surroundings. It stood some little distance from the rest of the village, on a somewhat unfrequented road, from which all but the roof was hidden by a clump of trees. The house itself was a small suburban villa such as are frequently built by speculators for sale, perfectly square in shape, though this was concealed to some extent by the bow-windows and porches with which it was adorned. What struck Gearhart at once as singular about it was that instead of being placed in or near the centre of the grounds it had been built far over at one side, standing only some ten or a dozen feet from the line fence. He also noted that close up to the fence on its other side stood a long story-and-a-half building that looked as though it might be a stable. No other building was in sight.

"Oh, no," explained Rackstraw, replying to his questions; "that's a sort of carpenter and machine shop belonging to Mr. Ryder. He's the man I bought of, you know, and dabbles around a little as an amateur mechanic. His house is behind that grove of maples. He built this house over on one side so that whoever bought it could sell off some of the grounds in building lots if he wanted to. Real thoughtful of him, I think, though if I'd built it myself I'd have had it nearer the middle."

It was easy for Gearhart to see for himself under what a terrible strain the whole family was living. Their faces were pinched and drawn and their eyes watchful and they shivered and shrank timorously at the slightest noise. Twice during dinner Mrs. Rackstraw, starting at some sound, dropped a dish, and each time at the crash the children fled shrieking and cowering to their father. It was a most dismal meal, and Gearhart was glad to escape from it on the plea of examining the house.

This he did thoroughly, as thoroughly as possible by lamplight, from cellar to attic, but nothing unusual rewarded his efforts. It was simply the ordinary country cottage, four rooms and butler's pantry on the first floor, four bed-rooms and bath-room on the second, and servant's rooms and cistern in the attic.

"Where do you get your water and gas?" he asked, upon seeing the cistern.

"There isn't any gas in the house; the company's mains don't reach this far," explained Rackstraw. "The water we pump into this cistern from a spring behind the house, but the connection is broken now, of course."

There was just one point in the construction of the house that struck Gearhart as a trifle unusual. In the cellar, instead of partitions or rows of piers, the structure was supported by a single large brick pier, exactly under the centre of it; and this determined him where he would spend the night. Carefully closing every opening from which a ray of light might escape, he began his watch.

It was not until the early hours of the morning, however, that his vigilance proved fruitful. Then the whole house noiselessly rose some three or four inches from the foundations and slowly began to swing around. Breathlessly Gearhart examined that central pier for perhaps five seconds; then, extinguishing his lamp, he let himself out, and rapidly but noiselessly slipped across to the fence, vaulted it, and crept to the front of the building on the other side.

When he started he had no other thought than to investigate an idea which had suddenly flashed upon him, and, if it proved the solution of the mystery, to return the next night with due precaution; but when he felt the door of the building yield under his hand, he threw caution to the winds, and snatching his revolver from his pocket, stepped boldly inside. A rapid glance around the room dimly illuminated by a lantern assured him that he was alone with a short, stocky man, who was just pulling on his coat.

"Ah, good morning, Mr. Ryder," said Gearhart, pleasantly.

The other man faced about with a convulsive jerk, turned a beautiful mottled green, and paused with his hands stuck half way in the sleeves of his coat.

"Sorry to disturb you," continued Gearhart, playing carelessly but ostentatiously with his revolver, "but I wish you'd just step over to Rackstraw's with me and explain what a tremendous lifting power one man can exert with an hydraulic jack."

At that instant that gentleman himself bolted in through the open door a shot-gun in one hand and an ice-pick, held daggerwise, in the other.

"Saw you go this way — thought I'd come help," he panted to Gearhart. "Why, Ryder, that you? What the deuce!"

"Yes," said Gearhart, "it's your neighbor Ryder, and also the human agency that has caused all your suffering."

With a dreadful cry of hate and horror Rackstraw sprang towards Ryder, and it was only by his utmost exertions that Gearhart prevented him from then and there venting his wrath upon the shrinking rascal.

Now thoroughly cowed, Ryder explained the workings of his machinery to them. The house was in reality a steel frame, supported entirely by the first floor, which was also the platform of an hydraulic jack, the piston running down through, and being concealed by, the central pier in the cellar which had excited Gearhart's suspicions. The other cylinder of the jack, with the lever by which it was operated, was concealed in the workshop, where, by an ingenious system of weights, he could at any time raise the house clear of its foundations. Then by a system of multiplying gearing, the mechanism of which ran under the cellar floor, he could swing the whole house around into any position desired.

"Exactly," said Gearhart, as he finished his explanation. "But what was your object in going to all the expense the construction of this thing cost you just to harass Rackstraw?"

"Oh, it wasn't him particularly. The — the one secret of wealth is to sell dear and buy cheap," said Ryder, with a sickly grin.

"You mean that you planned this arrangement solely for the purpose of selling this place for a fair market figure and then deliberately frightening your victims into selling it back to you for a little or nothing?" queried Gearhart, slowly. "And you were sure they would never tell simply because the story was so wild and improbable they knew no one would believe it?"

Ryder nodded a sullen assent.

"And how often have you been successful?"

"Only four times so far."

"And how much have you made each time?"

"I — I can't say exactly."

"On the average?"

"Well, maybe four or five thousand," replied Ryder, reluctantly.

"Four fives is twenty," said Gearhart quietly, "and the original purchase money makes it twenty-seven, five hundred. Mr. Ryder, you are going to buy it back once more, but not at your own figure. Kindly draw a check for twenty-seven thousand five hundred dollars to J. C. Rackstraw's order."

"What!" gasped Ryder, turning pale.

"Oh, come, I'm not going to gouge the man like that, if he is an infernal scoundrel," protested Rackstraw.

"Yes, you are," said Gearhart, positively. "I happen to know he can well afford it, and it's the only way to touch his heart and show him the error of his ways. By the way, I forgot my fee as a mechanical engineer for examining this ingenious machine. Mr. Ryder, before you leave this shop Mr. Rackstraw is going to cash your check for exactly thirty thousand dollars. I don't know whether the law could adequately reach such a pitiful scoundrel as you are or not, but I do know that you don't care particularly for any great publicity about this, so I intend to collect Rackstraw's damages and my fee right now. Your deed for the property will be ready for you to-morrow. Here's a blank check, change it to your bank, thirty thousand is the amount, and I wouldn't take long to make up my mind if I were you, for from now on until the check is in Rackstraw's hands for collection our time is worth just one thousand dollars every five minutes."

For perhaps two minutes the trio gazed into each other's eyes, Ryder imploringly, Gearhart inflexibly, and Rackstraw inanely. Then, with a sigh that came from his soul, Ryder reluctantly drew a fountain pen from his pocket.

Padgett's Reedville Quartette.*

BY LLOYD DORSEY WILLIS.

HOSTLY mists had begun to swing lazily across the marsh, touching here and there a reed which reared its tasseled head above its fellows. Before them, drifting shadows crept eastward like the rising tide. In the distance a Great Heron lumbered upward from the hidden lake, and beat its way clumsily through the air until lost to view.

As though it were vespers signal for the marsh frogs, a rambling chant slowly gathered volume. It swelled into a chorus and soon swallowed all other noises of the night in a grand wave of sound which reverberated back and forth between the black forests, circling like giant sounding-boards upon either side of the marsh. The sound waves rose and fell like the breathing of surf. Once, in a lull, a single voice, deep and rolling, left the others and sounded several sonorous notes, as though leading the chant.

The old resident had been listening for that. He laid his hand suddenly upon the visitor's shoulder and whispered eagerly, "You heard it?"

His companion nodded.

"That's the last of the 'Reedville Quartette,'" said the old resident, as he rested his arms upon the top rail of the little causeway, and settled his pipestem comfortably in the drooping corner of his mouth.

"I know his voice all right. I'd know it in a thousand. That's Bill, the basso, out there.

"You surely must have heard of 'Padgett's Reedville Quartette'? Why, man, the fame of that little band spread for miles around and there's few in this part of the Eastern Shore who haven't heard it sing.

* Copyright, 1908, by The Shortstory Publishing Company. All rights reserved.

"When old Abe Padgett came from down East to live in Reedville, he brought with him about the most complete menagerie that was ever seen about these parts. Joe Bigbee, who hauled his things from the river landing, said as how he felt like he was bringing a three-ring circus to town. His monkey was educated better than some of the folks who laughed at it, and the parrots could say about anything they wanted to. There was a ciphering pig and two white rats that could play on the pianner—a real little one, you know, about as big as a harmonica.

"Padgett had a mania for training animals, and the more difficult they were to handle the better he liked it. He had been with a circus most all his life, but had become too old for the road, and had come to Reedville to wait around until time to shuffle off the coil.

"He had no connections that I ever heard of, although he did used to say that the monkey was a sort of cousin of his. He certainly treated it as good as if it had been a blood relation. It ate at the table and, I believe, slept in the same bed with its master.

"Well, Padgett and his animal family settled down at the old Rutherford place, over there where you see that light at the end of the marsh. They lived happily for a while, and then disaster overtook them. The marsh ain't said to be the healthiest place on earth,—at least, it ain't especially recommended by the doctors, and has never been advertised as a health resort. The climate, or maybe the malaria, proved too much for the menagerie, and one by one a little row of graves over on the brow of that hill marked the resting place of Padgett's friends.

"The old man was all broken up by his loss. The neighbors offered him other pets—cats and dogs; but he didn't take any shine to them at all. He said they were too commonplace, that anybody could teach tricks to domestic animals. He wanted to train something that no one else had ever attempted. Altogether he was very peevish, and took to roaming barefoot about the marsh morning and night. He used to sit around, about this time in the evening, listening to the croaking of the frogs, which, I take it, are probably more numerous about here than any other place in Maryland. At any rate, they make more noise.

"It was while Padgett was listening to the marsh chorus one evening that he suddenly conceived an idea. He called it an inspiration, and began to perk up right away. After this he was away from home more than ever. When occasionally a visitor would drop in, a lusty halloo would bring Padgett splashing from the marsh, muddy and wet from head to foot, but looking as happy as a twelve-year-old schoolboy on Friday evening. He always carried a net and a closed basket during his prowls, and some of his neighbors wanted to know if he was going to start a frog farm.

"Along in the middle of summer it was noticed that all of the best frog music was over on Padgett's shore. There was still some musical croaking at other parts of the marsh, but it sounded weaker than before, and was usually drowned out by the melodious chorus from Padgett's. Just before this the old man had enclosed about an eighth of an acre of marsh with net wire at the base of his lawn. After the first speculation as to what Abe was up to, the neighbors lost all interest in the old man and his secret work.

"One by one his few friends ceased to visit him. His place was off the main road, and a hermit could not have been more alone. Ray Slocum, the miller's son, sprung a sensation about the postoffice one day by saying that he had been up by Padgett's the evening before and had heard a band playing somewhere around there, and had seen the old man jumping around the yard waving his arms like mad, but saying not a word. Someone suggested that the place was haunted and that its proprietor was out of his head.

"Curiosity began to get keyed up pretty high when one morning Padgett marched up to the postoffice and asked for his mail. He hadn't been there since the ciphering pig died. There was quite a number of letters, but Padgett paid little attention to them, shoved them carelessly down in the tail of his coat and said to Perkins, the postmaster, 'I would like to rent your hall for next Saturday night, as I want to give a concert there which will kinder shake up Reedville a bit, I reckon, the idee being new an' original.'

"Perkins and he fixed it up between them, and Padgett billed the town that same afternoon. The posters were short, home-made, and to the point. As near as I can remember, they stated that the concert would be the greatest novelty of the age, and that imported musicians would render all the familiar airs and many that were not so familiar. Ten cents admission would be charged. It is needless to say these posters created a sensation. Reedville had not listened to a concert since the village band of five pieces had marched off to join the Yankee forces away back in the sixties. It had never marched home again, and music in Reedville was practically dead. There were only a few who remembered the concerts that the old band used to give over by the village pump.

"None doubted that old man Padgett would have the finest talent to be secured at his concert, for he was a man of the world and of the circus. Every Saturday night the farmers from miles around came to Reedville to buy their weekly necessities and to talk over the crops, the weather, and a few other things.

"This Saturday night the whole countryside turned out, and Perkins' Hall was packed to the doors. Ed Mills took care of the door receipts. He had a hatful. A rude stage and curtain had been rigged up at one end of the room.

"'I haven't seen no musicianer fellows roannin' 'roun' town,' said Si Lewis, as he spat reflectively out of a window.

"There was a rustle of expectation through the hall as the curtain stirred uneasily. It swung softly back, disclosing what looked like a section of marsh, framed in by the three walls of the stage. Water could be seen at the base of the reeds, shimmering in the lamplight. A faint evening breeze drifted in and stirred the tops of the reeds and grass.

"A thrill of surprise swept through the assemblage. What was this? Where were the musicians? Could they be hiding in the grasses?

"Padgett did not give them chance to wonder long. Stepping to the front of the stage, a large bass viol beneath his arm, he signalled Ed Mills to put out the lights.

"'Do not be frightened,' he said, as the audience stirred uneasily at the darkness.

"A hush fell upon the gathering.

"Through the open windows came indistinctly the ceaseless chorus from the marsh. Suddenly Padgett sent a rumbling, long-drawn note from the viol echoing through the hall.

"As if in answer, a deep bass 'pud-er-unk' sprang into life from the bosom of the miniature marsh upon the stage. Another voice, somewhat higher, took up the note and carried it on a rising scale to another and yet another. The last was a metallic, though recognizable, imitation of the tenor.

"Again Padgett drew his bow and softly drifted into the strains of 'I Want to be an Angel.' With increasing volume, the voices in the reeds followed the familiar tune. They were harmonious and, though not exactly like anything ever heard on a stage before, blended pleasingly to the ear.

"The audience was spell-bound. 'Frogs!' they whispered. And then, in awed silence, sat with open mouths, drinking in the sounds which came uninterruptedly from the direction of the stage.

"Like a performer picking out the simple tune with one finger on an organ, the unseen singers piped in to fill out the notes suited to their voices. The viol supplied the bars they couldn't reach. True, some of the musicians, especially the piping tenor, couldn't hold the notes as could the deep basso, but each was clear and ringing, and seemed to show a certain amount of training.

"After the first few bars, it was noticed that the straggling chorus from the marsh outside dwindled into a few spasmodic croaks and finally ceased.

"Not a sound could be heard except the insistent strains of the hymn. As the last notes died away there was the shuffling of feet which precedes applause. Padgett neatly checked the threatening noise by suddenly swinging into 'Maryland, My Maryland,' with his four-voiced choir following, so to speak, at his heels. Again the awed silence. Without pause, tune after tune was rendered. The singers seemed to be carried away with a sort of professional enthusiasm. Along toward the end of 'Baby Mine' (the singing had lasted an hour now) the baritone's voice broke a little. At the end of the bar, Padgett ran his fingers half-way down the strings and gave a sudden, fierce lunge to his bow. The viol screeched wildly, discordantly. The singers seemed to bite their notes off and swallow them.

"There were four quick plunges into the water, and little waves lapped over the tank on to the stage. The lights were on, as if by magic, and a wild cheer went up. The old hall shook from end to end, and seemed ready to tumble down with the strain.

"Eight shining eyes glared wildly at the lights from the water-line among the reeds, and four little brains wondered what manner of giant fire-flies those could be which glared at them so wickedly.

"Well, Padgett's fame was made. From that time on he was looked upon as the cutest man about these parts. For miles around, the countrymen would drive over to hear the frog-quartette sing. They would only perform at night, when everything was quiet. Mostly on Sunday evenings there would be a special concert at Padgett's. With pardonable pride, the old man would tell his visitors how he labored for weeks in the marsh, selecting just the right voices for his little band; how he had been disappointed time and again, and had tried out at least a thousand frogs before he had been suited. His greatest trouble, he said, was in teaching the frogs the theory of music, and when they should chime in to fill up the notes required of them.

"The quartette was as healthy a looking bunch of frogs as I ever saw, but one of them, Tim, the tenor, died suddenly one day late in the summer. I think he swallowed a young water snake and it poisoned him. The blow almost broke Padgett's heart, and affected the other members of the band some too, I guess.

"The other three still performed at times, but it was hard to get in all the fine notes without Tim. They were ambitious, Sam, the second tenor, more than any, and it proved his undoing. One night, in trying to scale a high note which before had been carried off easily by Tim, something in Sam's throat snapped. He was so cut up about the loss of his voice that he hopped away one night and joined his family in the marsh.

"Ben, the baritone, and Bill, the basso, quarreled, and never again could be induced to sing together, so they were turned loose. Ben sang alone for a while over at the far end of the marsh.

"One night his voice was missed. A Bittern, which had waded there the day before, might have told where it was, but he didn't. There is no leader now but Bill."

The chorus rolled on, keeping time to the plaintive notes of a Whip-poor-will.

Suddenly the old resident whistled sharply. Like a ship checked by a giant wave, the melody ceased and then rolled on again as Bill, the basso, boomed forth his interrupted cry, a challenge to any who should doubt his right to lead the marsh chorus of Reedville.

Did You Ever Know

That Improper Food Often Causes the Liquor Habit?

It's a great proposition to get rid of a taste for liquor by changing food.

Improper food and stimulants like coffee and tea create unnatural appetites. The one who eats only proper food is normal in health and therefore normal in appetite.

By way of example take the case of a well-known business man of Lowry City, Mo., who says. "About three years ago my appetite failed me and my food disagreed with me. I got weak, nervous and dull and entirely unfit for business. Then like a fool I went to taking liquor to stimulate an appetite.

"For a time this worked well and I thought I had found a simple remedy, but I noticed I had to take more all the time and before long I found that I could not get along without the whiskey and I was in a pitiable condition.

"I tried to quit but it seemed impossible, as I needed nourishment and my stomach rejected food, and the more whiskey I drank the worse I got. I kept fighting this battle for more than two years and almost gave up all hope. Then I noticed an article about the food GRAPE-NUTS and concluded to give it a trial.

"I found I could eat GRAPE-NUTS with a relish and it was the first food that I found nourishing me in a long time. Soon my stomach trouble stopped, my appetite increased and then the craving thirst relaxed until all desire for drink was gone.

"I have used GRAPE-NUTS now for more than a year and I am now entirely strong and robust, entirely cured from drink and able to work hard every day. My gratitude for GRAPE-NUTS is unspeakable, as it has saved my life and reputation." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

A Free Sample of Delicious
GRAPE-NUTS
Food sent to any address upon request.

My Book Is Free

My treatment too—if that fails.

But if it helps—if it succeeds,
If health is yours again,
I ask you to pay—$5.50.

The book tells all.
I send it to you free
If you but write.

And further, I will send the name of a druggist near you who will let you take six bottles of my remedy,

Dr. Shoop's Restorative

On a month's trial. If it succeeds, the cost to you is $5.50. If it fails, the druggist will bill the cost to me.

Don't Wait Until You Are Worse.

Taken in time, the suffering of this little one would have been prevented:—

Two years ago my little girl was sick continuously for six months. We tried many doctors but they failed, yet it took only two bottles of your remedy to cure her, and she has remained cured.

You can tell others of this cure if you so desire.

Mrs. C. H. Avery, Rockdale, N. Y.

The wife of Omer Andrus of Bayou Chicat, La., had been sick for 20 years. For 8 years could do practically no work. He writes:

"When she first started taking the Restorative she barely weighed 90 pounds; now she weighs 135, and is easily able to do all her housework."

J. G. Billingsley of Thomasville, Ga.

He writes:

"I spent $250.00 for other medicines, and the $3.00 I have spent with you have done me more good than all the rest."

Both money and suffering might have been saved. And these are only three from over 65,000 similar cases. Such letters—many of them—come every day to me.

How much serious illness the Restorative has prevented I have no means of knowing, for the slightly ill and the indisposed simply get a bottle or two of their druggist, are cured, and I never hear from them.

But of 600,000 sick ones—seriously sick, mind you—who asked for my guarantee, 39 out of 40 have paid.

If I can succeed in cases like these—fall but one time in 40 in diseases deep-seated and chronic, is n't it certain I can cure the slightly ill?

All You Need Do.

Simply write me—that is all. Tell me the book you need. The offer I make may sound extravagant. But it isn't.—It would mean bankruptcy to me, though, were it not for my discovery. That discovery—the treatment of the inside nerves—taught me a way to cure. I do not doctor the mere organs. I doctor the nerves that operate them—that give them strength and power.

And failures are seldom—so seldom that I make this offer gladly, freely—so that those who might doubt may learn without risk.

Tell of it, please, to some sick friend. Or send me his name. That's but a trifle—a minute's time—a postal. He is your friend. You can help him. My way may be his only way to get well.

If I, a stranger, will do this for him, you should at least write.

Drop me a postal to-day.

Simply state which book you want and address Dr. Shoop.
Box 3232, Racine, Wis.

Book 1 on Dyspepsia
Book 2 on the Heart
Book 3 on the Kidneys
Book 4 for Women
Book 5 for Men (sealed)
Book 6 on Rheumatism

Mild cases, not chronic, are often cured with one or two bottles. At druggists.

DIAMONDS ON CREDIT

THE LOFTIS SYSTEM

permits any person of honest intentions, no matter how far away they may live, to open a confidential Charge Account for a Diamond, Watch or other valuable article of jewelry, and pay the same in a series of easy monthly payments.

How it is Done: Write to-day for our illustrated Catalogue, and from it select any article that you would like to wear or own; or, perhaps give to a loved one at Christmas. Your selection will at once be sent to your home, place of business or express office as you prefer. Examine it with all the care you wish; then, if it is all that you anticipated, and the best value that you ever saw for the money, pay one-fifth of the price and keep it. The balance you may send us in eight equal monthly payments.

On the Other Hand, if you decide not to buy, simply return the article at our expense. Whether you buy or not, we pay all express and other charges—there is no expense to you, neither do you assume any risk or obligation whatever. We submit our goods on their merits, with absolute confidence that their quality, low price and our easy terms will make you a pleased customer.

Your Christmas Plans will not be complete until you have looked through our new Christmas Catalogue, and considered what you can do in gift making in conjunction with the LOFTIS SYSTEM. The five dollars which you might pay for something cheap and trifling, will make the first payment on, and put you in immediate possession of a beautiful Diamond or a Fine Watch. With a very little money, you can make gifts that are commensurate with, and appropriate to the circumstances—for we require but one-fifth of the price of any article when we deliver it to you. IF YOU PREFER TO BUY FOR CASH we have a proposition to make which is thoroughly characteristic of our house. It is nothing less than our written agreement to return all that you pay for a Diamond—less two per cent., at any time within one year. You might thus wear a fifty-dollar Diamond for a whole year, then send it back to us and get $45, making the cost of wearing a Diamond less than ten cents per week.

We are the largest house in the Diamond business. We are also one of the oldest—Est. 1883. We refer to any bank in America—ask your local bank how we stand in the business world. They will refer to their books of commercial ratings and tell you that we stand very high, and that our representations may be accepted without a question.

Our Guarantee Certificate given with every Diamond, is the broadest and the strongest ever given by a house of unquestioned responsibility. Our exchange system is the most liberal ever devised, for it permits you to return any Diamond bought of us, and to get the full amount paid, in exchange for other goods or a larger Diamond.

An Account With Us is a confidential matter. We require no security; charge no interest; impose no penalties and create no publicity. Our customers use their charge accounts with us year after year, finding them a great convenience at such times as Christmas, birthdays, anniversaries, etc. We have no disagreeable preliminaries or vexatious delays. Everything is pleasant, prompt and guaranteed to be satisfactory.

Write to-day for catalogue

LOFTIS BROS. & CO.
Diamonds—Watches—Jewelry
Dept. P-52, 92 to 98 State St., Chicago, Ill.

BEFORE CHRISTMAS and AFTER!

THE Ingersoll Dollar Watch

WORKS TRANSFORMATIONS LIKE THIS IN A HUNDRED THOUSAND HOMES.

For the little boy and the big one,—Brother, Father, Sweetheart—nothing touches the spot like a good watch, and that's the INGERSOLL. An hourly reminder of the giver, its construction is such that years of hard knocks will not interrupt its perfect time-keeping.

...GUARANTEED ABSOLUTELY...
 Sold by dealers everywhere or postpaid by us. The same is always on the dial of our "Ingersoll." Look out for it and for clever "Just as good" stories.

ROBT. H. INGERSOLL & BRO. DEPT. 156, 51 MAIDEN LANE, NEW YORK.

THE WORLD'S HEADQUARTERS FOR ELECTRIC NOVELTIES AND SUPPLIES

IF IT'S ELECTRIC, WE HAVE IT
WE UNDERSELL ALL

Electric Hand Lantern

- Battery Table Lamp - $ 3.00
- Battery Hanging Lamp 10.00
- Telephone, complete, 2.50, 3.95
- Electric Door Bells - - 1.00
- Electric Tangle Lamps - 5.00
- Electric Hand Lanterns - 2.00
- 25.00 Medical Batteries - 2.95
- $13.00 Bell, with lamp's, 2.50
- Telegraph Bells - - 2.25
- Battery Motors - 1.00 to 12.00
- Bicycle Electric Lights - 2.00
- Electric Railway - - 3.75
- Pocket Flash Lights - 1.50
- Reedle Lights - The. 10 5.00

Send for free book. Describes and illustrates many of the most useful electric devices, at wonderful small prices. All practical. The lowest price in the world on everything electrical. Agents can make handsome commissions and many sales. Write for complete information.

OHIO ELECTRIC WORKS, Cleveland, Ohio.

TO FAT PEOPLE

I can reduce your weight 8 to 5 pounds a week without any radical change in what you eat; no nauseating drugs, no tight bandages, nor sickening cathartics. I am a regular practicing physician making a specialty of the reduction of surplus flesh; and after you have taken my treatment a few weeks you will say: "I never felt better in my life."

SAFE, PROMPT AND CERTAIN.

By my treatment your weight will be reduced without causing wrinkles or flabbiness of skin; heavy abdomen, double chin or other evidences of obesity will disappear; your form will acquire symmetry; complexion will be cleared; troubles of heart, kidneys, stomach or other organs will be remedied; and you will be delightfully astonished at the promptness and ease with which these results are accomplished under my system. Satisfaction guaranteed. Write for my new book on "Obesity, Its Cause and Cure," which will be sent sealed in plain envelope. It will convince you. Mention this magazine when writing.

HENRY C. BRADFORD, M. D.
 24 East 33d Street, NEW YORK

MONEY-MAKING ENTERTAINMENTS

With small capital, you can start in the congenial, money making enterprise of giving magic lantern and stereopticon exhibitions or moving picture entertainments. Every town offers opportunities. There is always a demand for a man with an outfit to give public exhibitions for churches, schools, societies, etc. We will send you FREE illustrated catalogues that tell what it costs to get an outfit, teaches how to operate, and instructs you how to conduct entertainments. We have the largest and most complete stock of such—views illustrating every subject of Popular, Religious and Scientific Interest. Lanterns for Home Amusement.

McALLISTER, Manufacturing Optician,
 40 Nassau St., N. Y.

MAGIC LANTERNS

STEREOPTICONS and MOVING PICTURE MACHINES

Views of the Whole World

THE EQUITABLE

HENRY B HYDE FOUNDER.

J.W.ALEXANDER
PRESIDENT

J.H.HYDE
VICE PRESIDENT

THANKSGIVING DAY

is a day of thanksgiving for the blessings of past years. But how about the future?

A man with an adequate Endowment policy in the Equitable has real reasons for giving thanks — not only for the past but for the future.

His future is absolutely secure — and so is that of his family.

HOW ABOUT YOU?

Vacancies for men of character to act as representatives.

Apply to GAGE E. TARBELL, 222 Vice President

For full information fill out this coupon, or write

THE EQUITABLE LIFE ASSURANCE SOCIETY of the United States

120 Broadway, New York

Dept. No. 115

Please send me information regarding an Endowment for $.....if issued at..... years of age.

Name.....

Address.....

C 10 $$3.25$
C 28 $$25.00$
C 15 $$10.00$
C 31 $$1.25$
C 21 $$6.00$
C 19 $$25.00$
C 20 $$2.00$
C 85 $$1.75$
C 32 $$1.00$
C 34 $$1.75$
C 36 $$2.00$
C 37 $$2.00$
C 38 $$2.00$
C 39 $$2.00$
C 40 $$2.00$
C 41 $$2.00$
C 42 $$2.00$
C 43 $$2.00$
C 44 $$2.00$
C 45 $$2.00$
C 46 $$2.00$
C 47 $$2.00$
C 48 $$2.00$
C 49 $$2.00$
C 50 $$2.00$
C 51 $$2.00$
C 52 $$2.00$
C 53 $$2.00$
C 54 $$2.00$
C 55 $$2.00$
C 56 $$2.00$
C 57 $$2.00$
C 58 $$2.00$
C 59 $$2.00$
C 60 $$2.00$
C 61 $$2.00$
C 62 $$2.00$
C 63 $$2.00$
C 64 $$2.00$
C 65 $$2.00$
C 66 $$2.00$
C 67 $$2.00$
C 68 $$2.00$
C 69 $$2.00$
C 70 $$2.00$
C 71 $$2.00$
C 72 $$2.00$
C 73 $$2.00$
C 74 $$2.00$
C 75 $$2.00$
C 76 $$2.00$
C 77 $$2.00$
C 78 $$2.00$
C 79 $$2.00$
C 80 $$2.00$
C 81 $$2.00$
C 82 $$2.00$
C 83 $$2.00$
C 84 $$2.00$
C 85 $$2.00$
C 86 $$2.00$
C 87 $$2.00$
C 88 $$2.00$
C 89 $$2.00$
C 90 $$2.00$
C 91 $$2.00$
C 92 $$2.00$
C 93 $$2.00$
C 94 $$2.00$
C 95 $$2.00$
C 96 $$2.00$
C 97 $$2.00$
C 98 $$2.00$
C 99 $$2.00$
C 100 $$2.00$

Any of these beautiful, genuine Diamonds and Jewels, in solid gold, hand-made mountings will be sent direct from our factory on receipt of price, or C. O. D., subject to inspection. Order by number. We send goods prepaid and guarantee safe delivery. Your money back without a question if you are not wholly pleased. Our Diamonds are of superior quality and we sell only fine, high-grade goods and list everything at wholesale prices. Our beautifully illustrated Catalogue shows thousands of photographs of the newest and finest goods. IT'S FREE—send for it to-day and save one-half on your Christmas shopping. We are the largest concern in the business and one of the oldest.—Est. 1840. We refer to the Commercial National Bank of Chicago. Capital two million dollars.

S. T. ALTEMUS & CO.
Diamonds, Watches, Jewelry, Sterling Silver, Cut Glass, Novelties, etc., etc.
23 P. Stewart Building, Chicago, Ill., U. S. A.

FREE We trust you to sell 10 lovely scarf-pins at 10 cents each. Send money, when sold, and we send you a Knitted Gold Watch Chain and Charm, solid gold pattern. All goods mailed free of charge. Send address. Thousands pleased. SCHWAB & CO., 1722 Amsterdam Ave., New York.

We Carpet Your Floor for $3

To introduce our new, serviceable and healthful

BRUSSELETTE ART RUGS

Attractive and artistic patterns, woven on both sides and in all colors and sizes. Easily kept clean and warranted to outwear higher-priced carpets. Sent prepaid to any point east of the Rocky Mountains. Money refunded if not satisfactory. Illustrated catalogue showing rugs in actual sizes sent free.

Sanitary Mfg. Co. (Inc.) Dept. 15, 145 Oxford St., Philadelphia, Pa.

A NEW DISCOVERY

PHILIPPINE ISLANDS MONSIEUR GULU CHWING GUM. We will send formula for making it for a red stamp. ENOS NOVELTY CO., Lock Box 501, McCook, Nebraska

IS YOUR INSTEP LOW?

Gilbert's Heel Cushions

"Worn inside the shoe,"

Arch the Instep. Increase Height

Make Better

Fitting Shoes. Remove In in Walking. Indorsed by physicians. Simply placed in the heel, felt down. Don't require larger shoes. 1 in., 50c; 1 1/4 in., 55c; 1 1/2 in., 55c; per pair. At shoe and dep't

READ Send name, size shoe, height desired, and ac. stamp for pair on ten days' trial.

GILBERT MFG. CO., 50 Elm St., Rochester, N. Y.

5 Pairs of Hose $1.00

DELIVERED FREE

Pequot Stockings From Mill to Wearer

The finest Egyptian Weave. Noted for durability and absolutely fast color. Ladies' medium weight, lace open work and embroidered designs, plain blacks or in colors.

So low a price for so high a quality only because no middleman's profit stands between mills and wearer.

Satisfaction guaranteed. Order to-day.

PEQUOT MILLS, HARTFORD, CONN.

Write for Booklet B.

La Vite
THE AUTOMATIC
Corset Steel.
Locks perfectly tight, but turn the lever and the corset flies open at once. A boon to stout ladies, a luxury to all. Easily attached. Send $2.50 for a pair. Our booklet tells all about it.
THE VITE CO.
Adams Bldg., Washington, D.C.

MANAGER WANTED

Income of $2,000 to $15,000 per annum, according to territory. Our firm has grown to such magnitude that we now need a competent resident manager in every county in the United States. In associating yourself with us you are entering the employ of the largest, most prominent and wealthiest concern of its kind in the United States, a firm whose references include National Banks and Commercial Agencies. The man we want as manager must qualify in accordance with our requirements; he must be a man of the highest character, able to furnish the best of references, and bond if necessary; must be thoroughly in earnest, energetic and a success in his present occupation. Special arrangements can be made by which our work can be done in connection with the applicant's occupation, thus opening up an opportunity to lawyers, physicians, clergymen, and persons now holding other positions. Address application to "TRUSTWORTHY," Box 1,816, New York City.

I Can Sell Your Real Estate no matter where it is or what it is worth. Send description, state price and learn my wonderfully successful plan. W. M. OSTRANDER
132 North American Building, PHILADELPHIA

$10 DRESSES ANY MAN

Complete from HEAD to TOE in latest Style FREE SAMPLES and Measurement Blanks.

TO INTRODUCE DIRECT TO THE WEARER OUR CUSTOM TAILORING we will make the first ten thousand suits absolutely to measure sent us for only $10 and give the following complete outfit FREE. Act nally $28 value for only $10 and nothing to pay till after you receive the suit and free outfit and find it just as represented. Send us your name and post office address, and we will send you FREE SAMPLES OF CLOTH, 4-foot tape line a measurement blank for size of Suit, Hat, Shirt and Shoes.

A GENUINE CHEVIOT

Suit made to measure in the latest English Stock #7116, well made and durably trimmed, such a suit as some tailors charge.....

A Danzig block, Derby or Fedora Hat..... 2.50
A pair of stylish Lace Shoes, the new queen last..... 2.50
A Percale Shirt, with Collar and Cuffs attached..... 1.25
A Neat Silk Year-in-hand Necktie or Bow..... .50
A pair of fancy Web Elastic Suspenders..... .50
A Japanese Silk Handkerchief..... .50
A pair of fancy Lisle Thread Socks..... .50
Thousands of American citizens pay daily for this... $28.00

DON'T DELAY—After having filled 10,000 orders our prices for these suits will be $50 and NO FREE ARTICLES.

CENTR' COMPLETE OUTFITTING CO.,
Dept. 661 242 Market St., Chicago, Ill.
Reference: First Nat'l Bank, Chicago Capital $12,000,000

For all who have weak Lungs

An old physician, retired from practice, had placed in his hands by an East India missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma and all Throat and Lung Affections, also a positive and radical cure for Nervous Debility and all Nervous Complaints. Having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, and desiring to relieve human suffering I will send free of charge to all who wish it, this recipe, in German, French or English, with full directions for preparing and using. Sent by mail, by addressing, with stamp, naming the paper.

W. A. NOYES,
647 Powers' Block,
Rochester, N. Y.

RUPTURE POSITIVELY CURED

I have cured thousands and can cure you. It never fails. H. B. ALLEN, M. D., Rooms 19 to 21 Telephone Building, Reading, Pa.

$80 A MONTH SALARY And all expenses to men with rig to introduce our Guaranteed Poultry Remedies. Year's contract. Bank references furnished. G. E. Bigler Co., X, 606 Springfield, Ill.

77 Information

Bureaus of the

New York Central Lines

Each city ticket office of the New York Central, Boston & Albany, Michigan Central, Lake Shore, Big Four, Pittsburg & Lake Erie, and Lake Erie & Western Railroads in the cities of New York, Brooklyn, Boston, Worcester, Springfield, Albany, Utica, Montreal, Syracuse, Rochester, Buffalo, Niagara Falls, Toronto, Detroit, Cleveland, Pittsburg, Columbus, Indianapolis, Cincinnati, Louisville, St. Louis, Chicago, Denver, San Francisco, Portland, Los Angeles, and Dallas, Texas, is an information bureau where desired information regarding rates, time of trains, character of resorts, hotel accommodations, and a thousand and one other things the intending traveler wants to know will be freely given to all callers.

A copy of No. 5 of the "Four-Track Series," "America's Winter Resorts," will be sent free, to any address, on receipt of a two-cent stamp, by George H. Daniels, General Passenger Agent, New York.

ENGINEERS IN DEMAND

Big Industrial Enterprises of World Clamoring for Trained Men

PROSPERITY IS THE CAUSE

Graduates of Technical Schools Offered Several Places Before Courses are Completed

(The Chicago Record Herald)

Technically trained engineers are in greater demand than ever before in the history of industrial enterprises. The supply of the technical schools for the present year was exhausted before the graduating classes received their diplomas. Heads of big manufacturing establishments offered flattering inducements to young engineers, and gave them an opportunity to choose from a half-dozen positions. The United States government entered the schools as a competitor for the services of the graduates, and representatives of foreign business houses sought experts to be used in the carrying out of great enterprises in foreign countries.

MANY POSITIONS OPEN

Foremost in the competition for experts, however, were the big American manufacturing establishments. Heads of firms handling great enterprises are on the lookout constantly for new blood, and a competent engineer or a young man whom the employers believe has the qualifications for an expert may pick from a dozen positions, either of which would be satisfactory. Salaries of these young men from their entrance into the profession vary from $1,200 to $2,500 a year. Experience, then, is the only thing required after his theoretical training, and in a few years his salary may be $5,000 or $15,000, according to his capacity and his energy.

SWIFT WANTS DESIGNERS

Chester S. Churchill (of Swift & Co.)—I find the greatest scarcity in designers and draughtsmen. Competent men are hard to find.

L. Ferguson (of the Chicago Edison Company)—Industrial affairs have grown so rapidly that we cannot find enough men to operate the increasing number of plants. A month ago I applied to the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and was told that as all their graduates were placed long before commencement, the school could recommend no engineers.

L. C. Doggett (of the N. K. Fairbank Company)—I have had positions for engineers in this company for more than three months. The demand for engineers is far beyond the supply.

Mechanical Drawing

TAUGHT BY MAIL

What one of our Students has done

Designed and Drawn by H. H. Sparks (student) for WARNER SUGAR REFINING CO.

MR. SPARKS SAYS:

"This design was worked out shortly after my coming to the Warner Company although I had not seen the inside of a sugar refinery before. The course was the means of securing me an exceedingly profitable position."

Other courses in Civil, Mechanical, Electrical, Stationary, Locomotive and Marine Engineering, Navigation, Architecture, Heating, Ventilation and Plumbing, Perspective Drawing, Pen and Ink Rendering, Sheet Metal Pattern Drafting, Refrigeration, Telephony, Telegraphy, and Textile Manufacturing including Textile Chemistry and Dyeing, Spinning, Weaving, Finishing, etc. They offer an opportunity to obtain instruction at home under the direction of members of the faculty of a resident engineering college of wide reputation.

A specimen instruction paper in Mechanical Drawing sent upon receipt of two two-cent stamps to cover postage.

Illustrated 180 pp. catalogue sent FREE on request

American School of Correspondence

At

Armour Institute of Technology

CHICAGO, ILL.

Room 10F

THE MAIL ORDER BUSINESS

as conducted under the direction of
GEO. R. CRAW

"A HEART TO HEART TALK"

Can a fortune be built from a cash capital of from $25 up, when invested in the mail order business, by any man or woman of average intelligence?

Yes, if the man or woman has a fair amount of common sense and good judgment, together with a capacity for work, and the energy that accomplishes things.

Success in the mail order business may come as easily to the man who keeps a set of books for $12.00 per week, as to the woman of leisure, who may take up the work to keep her time employed and to make her own speeding money.

In the case of salaried employees, a mail order business may be conducted at home after business hours, without interfering with regular employment.

The mail order business consists of sending out circulars or other advertising matter to a list of names of mail order buyers. Such lists are easily obtained at a low price. Circulars and advertising matter may be easily obtained at cost from over seventy reliable manufacturers, of good legitimate staple articles which are at present co-operating with beginners in the mail order business.

These manufacturers have been induced to do this through my Bulletin Service of Manufacturers and Mail Order Firms.

They do so because the small beginner of to-day may become the large mail order concern of to-morrow.

The great mail order house of Montgomery Ward & Co., which is worth millions, was started by a beginner who was a poor man at the beginning of the business.

I am prepared to put you into the mail order business, under the most favorable auspices, with the help of my Bulletin Service of Manufacturers and Mail Order Firms.

If you are interested in these talks, look for a new one each month in this magazine. Or if you want full information at once, write to-day for my free booklet, Co-operation for Profit. It presents the very best means for beginners in the mail order business. It will do you no good unless you have a working capital of at least $25.00. If you can not command this amount do not write to me until you can.

Read these talks each month.

Address GEO. R. CRAW,
Writing, Illustrating and Placing of Advertising.
Suite 64, 84 Adams St., CHICAGO, ILL.

BIG MONEY IN MAIL-ORDER BUSINESS

People are buying more by mail than ever before; one mail-order house does a business of a million dollars monthly; another receives 2,000 letters daily, nearly all containing money; mail-order trading is unquestionably the business method of the future. The field is large, the possibilities unlimited. Let us send you our plan (free) for starting beginners; it covers every point.

CENTRAL SUPPLY CO., 1090 Grand Ave., Kansas City, Mo.

Be Your Own Boss!

MANY MAKE $2,000.00 A YEAR. You have the same chance. Start a Mail Order Business at home. We tell you how. Money coming in daily. Enormous profits. Everything furnished. Write at once for our "Starter" and FREE particulars. R. C. KREIBER CO., 155 Washington Street, Chicago, Ill.

OPIUM

MORPHINE and LIQUOR
Habits Cured. Satisfaction Guaranteed. Established 1875. Thousands having failed elsewhere have been cured by us. Treatment can be taken at home. Write

The Dr. J. L. Stephens Co., Dept. B9, Lebanon, O.

EYE DISEASES CURED

If your eyes are weak, watery, and you see spots or strings, don't neglect them. These are sure signs of disease, and will cause total blindness. No matter how bad they are, they can be cured at your home, at small expense, by my method which is harmless but sure.

The Nadiosa Absorption Method cures Cataracts, spots, Scums, Granular Lid, Otic Nerve Diseases, and all cases of blindness. No Surgical Operations, Pains, or Risk. It has restored sight to thousands after other methods failed.

ZÉMOL

the wonderful cure of

Eczema

Acne, Barber's Itch, Dandruff and all Skin and Scalp Diseases. Write to-day for sample and circular. Testimonials from many prominent people. Manufactured only by the celebrated skin specialist

DR. M. M. HARRIS

512 Washington Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

Mailed anywhere on receipt of price, $1.00. Cure guaranteed or money refunded.

BERRY'S CREOLE TEA

FOR THE COMPLEXION.

In herb form, 10c; in tablet form, 50c. Works Wonders! Send 15c for valuable illustrated booklet, including SCIENTIFIC PALMISTRY.

E. R. BERRY CHEMICAL CO.,

Dept. C, 208 Olive St., St. Louis, Mo.

Darken Your Gray Hair

DUNY'S OZARK HERBS restore gray, streaked hair to its natural color, beauty and softness. Prevents the hair from falling out, promotes its growth, cures and prevents dandruff, and gives the hair a soft, glossy and healthy appearance. It WILL NOT STAIN THE SCALP, is not sticky or dirty, contains no sugar of lead, nitrate silver, copperas, or poisons of any kind, but is composed of roots, herbs, barks and flowers. PACKAGE MAKES ONE PINT. It will produce the most luxuriant tresses from dry, coarse and wiry hair, and bring back the color if originally was before it turned gray. Full size package sent by mail, postpaid, for 25 cents. OZARK HERB CO., Block 18, St. Louis, Mo.

EYE BOOK FREE!

Tells how all Eye and Ear Diseases may be cured at home at small cost by mild medicines. Its handsomely illustrated, full of valuable information, and should be read by every sufferer from any eye or ear trouble.

This book is written by Dr. Curtis, originator of the world-famed Mid Medicine Method, which without knife or pain speedily cures most hopeless cases. Dr. Curtis offers to send this book absolutely FREE to all who write for it! Address, Dr. F. Geo. Curtis, 353 Shattuck Bldg., Kansas City, Mo.

CANCER CURED

Dr. B. F. Bye's Oils for cancers and tumors are a painless cure. Most cases are treated at home. Send for book telling what wonderful things are being done. Gives instant relief from pain. Address Dr. B. F. BYE, 300 N. 11th St., Indianapolis, Ind.

AT YOUR OWN HOME

Mrs. Harriet Cassel, Van Wert, O., was going blind from granulation and corned eyes. I cured her at home. You can be cured also. Mrs. Robt. Dick, 455, 6th St., Chicago, was cross-eyed 48 years. I cured her without any dangerous operation by a treatment that never fails. It is absolutely Painless, Bloodless and Safe.

My latest book in colors with testimonials and my advice will be sent FREE. Write full history of your case. No medicines sent until ordered. P. C. Nadiosa, N.D., R. 212, 80 Dearborn St., Chicago

The very soul of the malt - delicious, healthful, invigorating, and absolutely pure - the perfection of brewing - is Pabst Blue Ribbon

The Beer of Quality

BARRIOS DIAMONDS

Just the Thing For Christmas

Experts Deceived
Jewelers Fooled
Pawnbrokers Victimized Government Inspectors Puzzled

By Barrios Diamonds

These stones are the most magnificent and faithful imitations ever discovered. They have all the fire, sparkle and luminous colors of real stones and may be worn anywhere with perfect assurance.

Each stone is accurately cut and perfectly polished. Mounted in heavy rolled plate. Exquisitely finished and warranted to wear for years. Exact duplicates in appearance of pieces costing from $75 to $250.

Our Guarantee

We guarantee these stones to be absolutely perfect in every particular and to retain their original beauty and brilliancy forever. We replace any Barrios Diamond, without expense to the purchaser, that fails to give satisfaction.

Beautiful Designs

This illustration shows the latest and most popular Parisian and New York styles and fancies. Every piece a work of art, its beauty and brilliancy will prove a constant pleasure and delight.

Appropriate Holiday Gifts

Any one of these beautiful pieces, $2.00
Your Choice

These articles are the most acceptable holiday gifts you can buy. Your holiday money will go farther here than anywhere else. Your gifts will be magnificent and sure to be appreciated.

These are the most magnificent values we ever offered. All orders filled the day they are received.

Barrios Diamond Co.

Dept. C.A., 146 State St., Chicago.

Save Half Your Cigar Money

We are making a great success of selling direct from factory to smoker exclusively, at half retail prices, the best possible cigars—all time-tested, tried, out brands; not one blend but many, to suit every possible taste. We have made a reputation for quality during the years we sold to dealers. Now we are making a reputation for saving its price as well, when we sell

Direct from our Factory to You

The saving in price does not come out of the cigars—they are better than ever. It comes from saving you the jobbers, the salesmen's and the retailers' profits—three profits in your pocket. The saving in price is clear to all. You can prove, without risk, how we'll please you in quality and critically satisfy your taste, for if you don't get as good a cigar or a better one from us for less money than you pay now—if you are not altogether pleased, you get your money back.

JOHN B. ROGERS & CO., The Pioneers, 247 Jarvis Street, Binghamton, N. Y.

and Get a Better Smoke

Why throw away one-half your cigar money on any "in-between man" in the face of a "no risk" guarantee like this?

Write for our booklet "Rolled Reverses" explaining everything, or to hasten matters—

For 75 Cents we will send you Postpaid a trial box of 25 assorted cigars, such as your dealer sells at 30 cents and two for a quarter, or if you prefer something at a less price, for 50 Cents we will send you 25 five and 25 cent values. Each cigar separately wrapped and described.

All transportation charges paid in advance by us.

Hardsburg, Ill.

"In regard to your cigars, I never smoked better, and with regard to price, there are none cheaper."

W. E. Richardson.

The WOODEN HEN

A high-class self-regulating incubator on a small scale. Fifty egg capacity.

Heat, moisture and ventilation automatically and perfectly controlled. Price only $6.00.

Send for the Wooden Hen Book; mailed free, together with a book containing 14 colored views and telling all about the EXCELSIOR INCUBATOR, if you name this paper.

GEO. H. STAHL, Quincy, Illinois.

FREE

THE MINING HERALD

Leading mining and financial paper, giving all the news from all the mining districts, and containing latest and most reliable information on the mining and oil industries, principal companies, dividends, etc. Every investor should have it. We will send it free for six months upon request. A. L. WISNER & CO., 32 Broadway, New York.

GROW GINSENG

Fortunes in little gardens; easily grown; handy everywhere. Seeds and roots for sale. Plant in Spring. Ginseng book and copy of Ginseng Culture magazine telling all about it 4 cents. Write us now and get posted.

OZARK GINSENG CO., Dept. 11, Joplin, Mo.

Five CENTS PER Share

for a short time only. Par value $1.00. Full paid, non-assessable. Buy now at the lowest price and join us as a charter member in the Five Bears Mining Co., who own outright eight rich properties in Plumas Co., California. Over 1,000 feet of tunnels and crosscuts, all in ore assaying from $7 to $65 per ton. Over 10,000 tons ore in sight ready to stop. Do not wait. Now is the time before the stock advances to $25. or higher, to-morrow may be too late.

$10.00 WILL BUY 200 SHARES

$20.00 buys 400 shares—$50.00 buys 1000 shares. Take our advice and buy all you can.

Monthly Payments if desired.

We have personally examined the entire property and honestly believe this will prove the best gold mining stock ever offered. Write for Five Bears Prospectus, Map and latest reports from the mine. Booklet, "How to Judge Stocks," free. Address.

UNION SECURITY CO.,

406 Gaff Bldg., Chicago, Ill.

A SPORTSMAN'S BOAT

Mullins' "Get There" Steel Duck Boat

14 feet long, 36 inches wide. Air chamber each end. Can not leak. Can not sink. Practically indestructible. No caulking. Weighs 85 lbs. Write for booklet. $20.00 Price, with seat, oars, paddle, and slat bottom, complete and crated.

W. H. MULLINS, 471 Depot Street, Salem, Ohio

He's a Lightning Calculator

He Handles Figures With Marvelous Ease and Rapidity

Not a Calculating Prodigy, but Has Acquired His Faculty for Figures Through a New System Which Any One Can Master

Mr. Clarence E. Baker, with the banking firm of Bartlett, Fraser & Co., 7 New Street, New York City, is a young business man who can teach professional lightning calculators a great many things they have never known about handling figures. He adds, subtracts, divides, and multiplies any problem almost instantly. He can multiply 3214 and 4231, or any similar problem, without writing any partial product; he simply writes the answers. He adds with marvelous speed and accuracy, and it is seldom that in making an extension on a bill he requires paper and pencil. He usually writes the product in its proper column without any apparent effort.

Mr. Baker says that he never seemed to possess any particular bent for figures until he began a systematic study of short cuts in figures under a new system. He attributes all of his success to that system, and expresses the opinion that any one can master it as he has done. In a recent communication he said, "Two of my promotions I owe directly to my ability to figure fast and accurately, which in turn is due directly to the excellent training I received from your course in rapid calculation. It is beyond me to adequately express my appreciation of the benefits to be derived and which I myself received from this course."

If you are interested in the subject of calculation; if you want to handle figures quickly, accurately, and easily, send for the free book entitled "Rapid Calculation." It tells about a course of study that has astonished mathematicians and has revolutionized old processes of calculating. The system is entirely new, but it has been adapted perfectly to the needs of business men. It may be mastered at your own home without loss of time. The free book explains a number of problems and offers suggestions for testing speed, figures that will be of use to any one.

A postal card sent to-day will bring the free book to your very door.

Address The Commercial Correspondence Schools, Dept. 22X, Rochester, N. Y.

How to Grow Tall

Wonderful Discovery made by

Prof. K. LEO MINGES

Why be short and stunted, when for the mere asking you can become tall and graceful? Write to-day and we will mail to you, free of charge, the secrets of how to grow tall. May be accomplished at home by either sex.

We have made a life-long study of the cartilage system and thoroughly understand it.

THE CARTILAGE CO.

Dept. 347, ROCHESTER, N. Y.

MR. SMOKER

Send for Booklet.
HAVANA HAND MADE CIGARS

2 1/2¢ and 3¢
A PIECE

G. O. IVES, DEPT. 10, BINGHAMTON, N. Y.

TYPEWRITER HEADQUARTERS

222 Broadway, New York, sell all makes under half price. Don't buy before sending for samples of writing, prices, exchange and unprejudiced advice. Immense stock for selection. Shipped free by trial. Guaranteed first-class condition. Dealers supplied.

THE LOCKE ADDER

Buy a Locke Adder to save your brain

Only $5

CAPACITY 999,999,999

Fastest, simplest, handiest, most practical and durable, low-priced calculating machine. Adds, Subtracts, Multiplies, Divides. Cannot make mistakes. Computes nine columns simultaneously. Saves time, labor, brain, and will last a lifetime. "One should be in every business office."—Joe Lee Johnson, State Revenue Agent, Austin, Texas.

"It is worth its weight in gold."—Chas. W. Thompson, Asst. U. S. Dept. of Labor, Boston, Mass.

Price $5.00, prepaid in U. S. Booklet free. Agents wanted.

C. E. LOCKE MFG CO., 81 Walnut St., KANSAS CITY, MO.

BOX OPEN.

BOX COVER.

Give Him Comfort
PRESIDENT SUSPENDERS
Handsome boxes for CHRISTMAS

Any store 50c and $1.00 or mail prepaid.

THE C. A. EDCARTON MFG. CO.
Box 201, Shirley, Mass.

$10 SPENSER $10
Oct. 1, 1903

Automatic Sewing Machine

To introduce we shall sell the new "Spenser" at ten dollars. We want you to use the Spenser. We know you will like it. Order at once. Direct all correspondence to our Main Store which is opposite Hotel Touraine, 211

Tremont St., Boston, Mass. The Spenser is guaranteed, and if on two weeks' trial you are not satisfied, return it to us, and we will refund price paid. Free descriptive booklet sent for the asking.

SPENSER SEWING MACHINE CO.

211 TREMONT STREET
BOSTON, MASS.

32 WEST 14th STREET
NEW YORK CITY

20,000.00 IN PRIZES

TO PEOPLE WITH IDEAS

For the best answers to TEN QUESTIONS, concerning Ainslee's Magazine, we will give

$20,000.00 IN PRIZES

No expenditure of money or soliciting of subscriptions is required to enter into this contest. The use of your brain is the only condition. We want ideas.

Send to-day for list of questions and full particulars.

AINSLEE MAGAZINE CO.
156 Fifth Ave. New York

Mail This Coupon at Once

Bureau of Criticisms and Suggestions,
AINSLEE'S MAGAZINE,
P. O. Box 192, NEW YORK CITY

GENTLEMEN:

Please send, without cost to me, list of TEN QUESTIONS for the best answers to which you will award $20,000.00 in prizes.

NAME

ADDRESS

B-C-19

TRADE MARK

MACKINTOSH'S

EXTRA CREAM

TOFFEE

A Delicious Old English Confection which is being introduced into this country. Most any dealer can supply you. A 4-lb family tin sent by mail $1.60, or a sample package for 10 cents in stamps.

Lamont, Corliss & Co.
Importers,
78 Hudson Street, New York City

MADE IN SWITZERLAND

For Eating Only

Here is a Treat!

If you have never tasted this "irresistibly delicious" eating chocolate, send for a sample and interesting illustrated booklet "An Ascent of Mont Blanc." They are both FREE.

This surpassing delicacy, made of pure chocolate and Switzerland's Swiss milk containing all its cream, Gives Eating Chocolate A New Meaning. A pure, wholesome confection and a nourishing food; does not create thirst. The only chocolate that can be eaten freely by children, invalids, and persons of weak digestion. Insist upon PETER'S—the original—others are imitations. Do not fail to send for Free Sample.

Lamont, Corliss & Co.
Agts, 78 Hudson St., N. Y.

A Blush of Excitement and lots of fun. That's all. Irresistible picture cards are printed with invisible ink. Nothing can be seen until held over lamp or fire; then the whole business will appear before you. Have a few cards with you at parties or entertainments; show them to your friends, it will be the greatest sport they ever had; or tell someone to heat it and see their picture appear. They are desirable, just what you want. It's new, just out. PACKAGE SENT BY MAIL FOR DIME.

BOXA FIDE BLENDING CO., Chelsea, Mass.

300 Foreign Stamps, 10c. 104—all different—from Malta, Bulgaria, India, etc., Album 10c. 40 different U.S. 10c. 200 varieties 25c. 400 varieties $1.25. 1000 varieties $4.25. 12 page list free. Agents wanted. 50 per cent. commission.

K. CROWELL STAMP CO., 514 Caxton Building, Cleveland, O.

PHOTOS FROM LIFE

Model studies, Stereos, Beauties, etc., 100 small photos and two large ones, $1 note.

S. Recknagel, Nachf. Munich (Germany).

SONG-WRITERS AND POETS A SUCCESSFUL SONG WILL MAKE YOU RICH.
We write music to your words, complete and arrange compositions.
Green House Co., Steubenville, Ohio.

PLAYS FOR AMATEURS
The largest stock in the U. S.
Any title in print

Our catalogue is sent FREE for the asking. It includes Plays, Recitation and Dialogue Books, Books of Etiquette, Letter Writing, Games, Boys' and Girls' Stories, etc.

THE PENN PUBLISHING COMPANY

949 Arch Street, Philadelphia.

THE PERFECT SEASONING

Tabasco Sauce

YOUR XMAS DINNER
Will be far more enjoyable if you use this delightful Relish. Indispensable on the table and in the kitchen. For SOUPS, ROASTS, SALADS, OYSTERS, CLAMS, FISH, SAUCES, GRAVIES, Etc.
Imparts delicious flavor; insures good digestion.

THE ORIGINAL McILHENNY'S TABASCO
Used in leading Hotels, Clubs and Restaurants for nearly half a century. AT ALL DEALERS.
FREE—write for "Tabasco Book"—new and unique recipes.

McILHENNY'S TABASCO. NEW BERIA, LA.

THE IDEAL BABY YARD

Can be used in or out of doors. Saves mothers time and worry, as they can attend to their household duties with the assurance that the child is well guarded from accident. Folds flat when not in use, opened makes a yard 4 x 4 ft. sq. Send for booklet.

THE BROOKS CO., ROXBURY, MASS.

LADIES' BEADS FREE-GIRLS.

Make pretty Chains, Beads, Purses, Fobs etc. Our booklet telling how to make Oriental and Indian Fancy Work and a card of beads for a 5c stamp. Evening Hours, DEPT. 86, WEEHAWKEN, N.J.

QUILTED MATTRESS PADS

They are a sanitary necessity for health and comfort and become a luxury when once used. They are quilted of bleached muslin, both sides, with pure white wadding of the finest grade between. These pads come in all sizes, bound ready for use. They will keep the crib in a sanitary condition, and the baby clean and sweet. They wash perfectly. Ask your dry goods dealer for the quilted mattress pads, and if he cannot supply you, write to us. Send for sample of pads. THE EXCELSIOR QUILTING CO., 15 LaSalle St., New York having fancywork to sell, Dollies, Centerpieces, Battenberg, Crocheting and Drawwork, send stamped envelope.

Ladies

LADIES' EXCHANGE, Dept. T, 284 Monroe Street, Chicago.

'FEMINOLOGY'

Table of Contents and sample pages FREE. A scientific book for women, one of the most valuable works ever written. It treats of marriage, care of babies, diet, nursing, children's diseases and their care, physical culture, personal beauty, giving information that is all important to health and happiness. Has 300 pages, beautifully illustrated, and 48 colored plates.

If the information contained in FeminoLOGY were more widely and timely known and heeded, countless and needless miseries might be avoided. —Chicago Tribune.

Write for 32-page table of contents and see what this valuable book contains. C.L. Dressler & Co., 236 Gladys Av., CHICAGO, ILL.

SUN Incandescent Gasoline LAMP

Safe as a candle, 100 times as powerful. Soft, brilliant light, restful to the eyes. Cheaper than gas, electricity, kerosene, benzine, coal oil; gives more light. No dirty wicks; no smoky flames; no odor. Takes its own gas.

Finest light for home or store. Conforms to insurance underwriters' rules. Branch supply depots in all larger cities. Liberal commission to Agents. Write to-day for catalogue.

SUN VAPOR LIGHT CO.

Box 116 Canton, Ohio.
(Licensee of the ground patents for Vapor Lamps)

THE SUN OUTSHINES THEM ALL

THE "BEST" LIGHT

Outshines the Sun. It's pure white light makes day of night. Costs less than kerosene; six times more powerful than electricity. Examined, tested and permitted by underwriters' association.

CATALOG FREE.

NO DIRT — NO WICK — NO SMOKE — NO SMELL

Agents wanted. Exclusive territory, good commission paid.

THE BEST LIGHT COMPANY.

Sole Owners of Original Patents. 236 E. 6th St., Canton, Ohio.

Her wish has at last been granted ;
Soros is now makes Shoes for her Boys and Girls.

Something new, Soros is Shoes for the younger generation. Ask to see them in any of our stores or departments. For sale in all the leading cities of the world.

Purity—above everything—distinguishes Schlitz beer from the common.

There's a difference, of course, in the barley, the hops, the yeast. We use the costliest materials. But the goodness of Schlitz is mainly due to its healthfulness.

The artesian water used—the absolute cleanliness—the filtering of the beer, and of even the air that touches it—the extreme aging—the sterilizing of every bottle after it is sealed; those are the facts that make Schlitz what it is.

Those are the reasons why the demand for Schlitz exceeds a million barrels annually.

Yet no standard beer—no beer that is good for you—costs less.

Ask for the Brewery Bottling.

CRYSTAL Domino SUGAR

A Triumph in Sugar Making!

Sold only in 5 lb. sealed boxes!

"CRYSTAL DOMINO SUGAR" is packed in neat, sealed boxes, and is NEVER sold in bulk. It is packed at the refinery and opened in the household;—there is no intermediate handling. Hence, no dirt, no waste, no possible adulteration. Every piece alike—and every piece sparkles like a cluster of diamonds, the result of its perfect crystallization. Convenient in form, perfect in quality, brilliant in appearance, no sugar made can equal it in excellence. When buying this sugar remember that the sealed package bears the design of a "Domino" Mask, "Domino" Stones, the name of "Crystal Domino," as well as the names of the manufacturers. You will be pleased the moment you open a box. You will be better pleased when you have tried it in your tea, coffee, etc. It is sold by ALL FIRST CLASS GROCERS, and is manufactured only by HAVEMEYERS & ELDER SUGAR REFINERY, NEW YORK.

STEVENS

SANTA CLAUS will get around more quickly this year, as he has adopted the "Stevens-Duryea" automobile to speed him safely on his way. More than ever will St. Nick be welcomed, because he is loaded down with Stevens Rifles, Pistols and Shotguns for the youth of the land. Give your boy that "Stevens" he has been wishing for so long, and make this Xmas time a memorable one for him. "Stevens" means Safety, Accuracy and Reliability to the highest degree attainable, and makes Men out of Boys.

Our line is a large and varied one, comprising Rifles, Pistols and Shotguns.

Ask your dealer and insist on the "Stevens." If you cannot obtain them, let us know, and we will ship direct, express prepaid, upon receipt of price. Don't fail to send for free illustrated catalog. It is a book of ready reference, and should be in the hands of every sportsman.

"It can be done!"—that new and attractive puzzle of ours, but will keep you guessing until you solve it. Try your luck these long winter evenings. Address "PUZZLE DEPARTMENT," sending two 3-cent stamps, and our puzzle is yours.

BELOW THE WATER LINE

Many a good ship received a blow below the water line that didn't show, but the ship went down.

Many a man and woman is being fatally injured by coffee, but the hurt don't show sometimes until it is too late.

If coffee causes stomach and liver troubles, or shatters the nerves, it will finally locate a fixed disease in some one of the organs and then the "ship may sink."

It is easy to quit coffee by changing to POSTUM FOOD COFFEE well boiled and delicious, with a flavor all its own.

Look sharp that cook boils it enough.

POSTUM. There's a reason.

THERE'S NOURISHMENT IN Good Coffee

Cheap painted coffees are poisonous. The campaign against poisonous coffees has been victorious. To-day the housekeeper can obtain BLANKE'S COFFEE in almost every town.

BLANKE'S FAUST BLEND COFFEE

IS NOT ONLY GOOD, IT IS
The Best on Earth or Anywhere Else

Indorsed by scientists as pure and wholesome. A can by mail for 60 cents, if your dealer doesn't handle it. Specify whole, ground or pulverized.

PLAYING CARDS We will send a pack of our Souvenir Gilt Edge Playing Cards for 15 two-cent stamps. These cards are the finest made. Regular retail price, 75 cents. Address

C.F. BLANKE TEA & COFFEE CO.
ST. LOUIS

The best little friend I have LIEBIG COMPANY'S EXTRACT OF BEER

Sore Throat

Hoarseness, Quinsy, Tonsillitis
Laryngitis and other throat troubles quickly relieved and promptly cured by the use of

Hydrozone

This scientific germicide is used and endorsed by leading physicians everywhere. It is absolutely harmless, yet a most powerful healing agent.

By killing the germs that cause these diseases, without injury to the tissue, Hydrozone cures the patient. Sold by Leading Druggists. If not at yours, will send bottle, prepaid, on receipt of 25 cents.

Prof. Charles H. Harchand

Dept. C-63, Prince Street, NEW YORK